That Lake to Ocean Canal.
Good News for Law Breakers.
Are You Hoarding Silver?

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE FRENCH franc "cracked" yesterday, which in the language of money speculators means that it dropped in value. Also millions more of French gold have been shipped to the United States, while American stock prices are rising. All this worries the French, and when the French worry, they do not grin and bear it.

Yesterday fear of serious rioting brought large numbers of soldiers, and machine guns on wheels, easily moved about, into Paris.

"Few pedestrians were seen on the streets."

The French are having their troubles later than some of the other countries. We think, hope, believe and pray that we are getting over ours. But many of us would like to know what our dear dollar will look like a year hence.

Europeans are buying American stocks for various reasons, principally because they think our dollar will drop in value and therefore our stocks will go up.

However, to buy American stocks you must first buy American dollars with which to pay for the stocks, and that process puts up the value of the dollar. It is all quite complicated.

IN THIS column you read, perhaps, statements made by a Canadian newspaper about the proposed American-Canadian treaty for building a waterway via the St. Lawrence from the Great Lakes to the ocean.

The Canadian editor said America would bear the greatest part of the expense, and get only one million horsepower, against four million horsepower for Canada.

Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, of Milwaukee, interested as many millions of Americans are in connecting the Great Lakes with the ocean, telegraphs:

"Toronto Mail statement completely refuted by United States official documents and records. We do not bear the major part of the expense, or abandon sovereignty over Lake Michigan. We get one-half of all the horsepower developed."

TO ESTABLISH and connect the Great Lakes and the ocean, enabling products from midwestern farms and factories to go by ship direct to Europe and Asia, would be of greatest value to this country. To have the canal is more important than any little details of the bargain driven.

In addition, President Roosevelt is said to desire that the treaty be approved by the Senate and the canal dug. If he wants it, it will be done. That is a safe prediction.

IF AT ANY time you have violated the prohibition law, stop worrying. The Supreme Court decided yesterday that, prohibition being dead, nobody can be tried for violating a law that does not exist. The successful bootlegger may rest peacefully on his laurels and profits.

DEAR OLD UNCLE SAM, who says gold isn't good for you, but exactly right metal for himself, was happy yesterday.

Mr. Morgenthau had accumulated another million and a half of gold yesterday, raising the Treasury's supply of the precious metal to seven thousand and nineteen million dollars' worth. And millions more of it is coming in from Europe.

MR. SCHWAB, of the steel company, used to say, when he saw a little dog chasing the express train, that he wondered what the dog would do with the train if he caught it.

You wonder what Uncle Sam plans to do with all the gold in the world, when and if he gets it. He can't hold it in his lap.

THE UNITED STATES is gathering information about silver, who has it, who is hoarding it, why it was bought, why it is hoarded.

You remember what happened when you hoarded gold, if you did. You had to give it to the government at the old price, and then watched it go up fifteen dollars an ounce.

Perhaps you will see something like that in silver. One hundred million ounces of it are said to be held in this country for speculative purposes.

THE GOVERNMENT continues its generous distribution and lending of money. New York City will get twenty millions to clear away slums, and build new dwellings.

Some of the new buildings will be put along the waterfront, that children of the poor may have fresh air in summer.

As soon as New York is on a little better financial basis, more millions will be provided for subways.

CATTLE ARE hereafter to be classed among "basic commodities" under the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Two hundred million dollars will be distributed among growers of beef and dairy cattle, about "50-50."

THIS STORY is told, not guaranteed.

"I am going to plant ten thousand acres of cotton."

The government said:

"No, please don't do that; plant only seven thousand acres and we will give you money enough to make up for your loss in keeping three thousand acres idle."

The man said, resignedly:

"Oh, very well."

And the money he got for leaving three thousand acres idle was enough to pay for the

U.S. LEADERS HERE, PUSH POLL ON UNION

'Co-operate or Fight' Verdict of Steel Industry Waited

The federal government today called upon the steel industry for a final test on the labor provisions of the NRA.

Out of a conference with counsel for the Weirton steel company late today, Milton Handler, general counsel for the National Labor Board, expected to bring steel's final verdict—acquiesce or fight.

The case at hand was that of the Weirton company, but behind that firm stood the American Iron and Steel Institute, representing virtually the entire industry.

The point at issue was whether the government will be allowed to poll the steel workers in the Weirton mills without a court battle.

WORKERS' VIEWS WANTED

From such a poll President Roosevelt hopes to learn whether the workers themselves are in favor of the company union which Weirton Steel has set up to the exclusion of the Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

Handler and James L. Dewey, Labor Department conciliator, arrived here from Washington this morning. Their first move was to confer with representatives of the Amalgamated, some of whom came from the company mills at Weirton, W. Va.

Of the forthcoming conference with Earl F. Reed, counsel for the steel company, Handler said:

"We came down here to get the co-operation of the company in order to conduct a fair, accurate and reliable survey of the desires of the workers of the company regarding holding an election. The conference today will determine whether the extent to which the company will extend its co-operation."

Handler will ask the steel company to furnish a list of the company's 12,000 employes in Weir-

Dr. Wynekoop Wins New Trial Appeal

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—The second trial of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, accused of slaying her duaghter-in-law, Rheta, today was set for February 19.

Somewhat improved in health since her first trial was interrupted by illness, the 63-year-old physician appeared in the court of Chief Justice Philip J. Finnegan this morning and requested the case be reopened at the earliest possible opportunity.

Injuries Fatal To Hospital Aide

Anthony Retkunis, 60, died today in Allegheny General Hospital, where he was employed. He had been missing for three days when, on Sunday, he staggered into the hospital. An autopsy blamed death on injuries apparently received when beaten.

GUARD HOTELS IN STRIKE

Police kept a watchful eye on the employes' strike at the William Penn Hotel and Dutch Henry's restaurant today as a man and a woman arrested in connection with the walkout were freed in Central Police Station.

Cafeteria waitresses returned to their work at noon, the William Penn management said.

Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall called in representatives of both sides and warned against violence or law breaking of any kind.

Pickets bearing signs "Service as Usual" and "Apply for Work" appeared on the sidewalks around the William Penn in behalf of the

New Concrete Bids Show Price Slash

Complaints by Ray Sprigle, director of the county department of property and supplies last week that bidders were in collusion on concrete resulted in substantial reductions in new bids opened today.

In the old bids, rejected by the county commissioners, the price ranged from $10.05 to $12.60 a ton. Today the bids ranged from $8.65 to $10.70. The county will use 750 tons on roads.

Capital Blanketed By Heavy Snowfall

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—More snow blanketed the capital today, causing automobiles and pedestrians plenty of skidding trouble, while hundreds, including President Roosevelt, nursed colds.

Washington was just about dug out of one of its heaviest snows of the winter when more descended yesterday and a bit more early today.

M'NAIR, AIDES CLASH OVER DANCE

Police Heads Won't Haul Raiding Officer Before Trial Board

Mayor McNair's two highest public safety officials today frowned on the proposal to hale a lieutenant befoer the Police Trial Board because he halted a dance of the Thirty-first Ward Roosevelt Club Saturday night.

Public Safety Director Ralph E. Smith said he and Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall had no intention of summoning Lieut. Michael Carney before the board. Carney was ordered to the Mayor's office and publicly rebuked by McNair yesterday for stopping the dance on the ground that no permit had been obtained.

ADVISES PROTEST

The Mayor concluded by advising the club members who made the complaint to carry their protest before the Police Trial Board.

Today Safety Director Smith said:

"There is nothing before us that would give us any reason to order Lieut. Carney before the trial board. He has done nothing contrary to his orders and as far as Supt. Marshall and myself are concerned we have no intention of citing him to appear."

The Mayor yesterday told Lieut. Carney, who ordered the raid:

"You stopped a perfectly orderly dance for no reason at all. I think there's politics mixed up in it. Are you a Coyne man?"

Carney said he "wasn't, exactly."

SCORES REPUBLICANS

McNair continued:

"We're holding a lot of Republicans on the payroll and they better be careful how they go around persecuting people. The mere fact it's a Roosevelt club doesn't mean you have to shut it down. There's plenty of criminals you can use your time chasing."

Carney protested he had been acting under orders from "Capt. Moser."

A committee, headed by B. W. Muiter, set off the fireworks when it appeared to protest the closing of the dance.

McNair declared he interpreted the state law as giving the Mayor discretion in issuing permits. He said he had advised Supt. of Police Marshall permits weren't necessary for churches, fraternal organizations, legions and other reputable societies.

DOUBTS ANGELS ON FORCE

He ordered Carney into his office.

Asked why he closed the dance, Carney revealed that he had received an anonymous complaint against it.

Later McNair complained to reporters about the police force, averring that he couldn't "pry a new man on with a crowbar." He said he doubted that Republican policemen, about whom there were formerly many complaints, had turned "angels" over night.

JURY HEARS LANDLADY OF MULLS

Tells of Condition of Family When Girl Was Found Slain

The landlady of the three Mulls accused of slaying Margaret Schwickrath testified today that the trio "looked terrible" when they returned to their lodgings on the day Margarets' body was found stuffed in a sewer at Verona.

Mrs. Marie Laufman, the landlady, said the clothing of Roy Mull was all "mussed up." When she asked his wife, Grace Mull, where Margaret was, she said Mrs. Mull told her:

"We had a hot argument."

The Mulls and their son, Elmer, are on trial in Criminal Court charged with murdering the Schwickrath girl who lived with them. The state charges Mrs. Mull was jealous of her husband's attention to the 23-year-old girl.

Mrs. Laufman testified she saw Margaret last on October 29, the day before her body was found. She added:

"She seemed rather downhearted when I talked with her."

The following day the Mulls came to their lodging house at 510 East Ohio street from Haydenville, where they had a cabin. It was then, she said, Mrs. Mull told her there had been a "hot argument" because Margaret wanted to sell the furniture.

Girl Leads Bandits In Coal Man Holdup

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Led by a fashionably dressed girl, four masked robbers today tied Irving C. Lanning, a coal company official, to his chair and fled with $150.

They missed by a few hours more than $1,000 which the official said he had removed from the office because he was afraid of a holdup.

'SCANDALOUS OPERATIONS' CHARGED

Aluminum Company Linked as Boeing Bares Big Profits

Cries of "scandal" were linked with prominent names today as Congressional investigations involved three departments of the government. Developments:

1—The air mail probe has revealed "scandalous operations" in connection with government subsidies, Senator McKellar declared, predicting president Roosevelt would nullify some existing contracts.

2—Secretary Dern instructed the Department of Justice to look into charges of lobbying at the War Department, while a grand jury investigation of a civilian's activities in connection with auto contracts called Assistant War Secretary Woodring as a witness. (See story on Page Two.)

3—The House Naval Affairs Sub-committee voted to summon Charles Francis Adams, Navy Secretary under President Hoover, and two of his aides, former Assistant Secretaries David S. Ingalls and Edward Warner, as a result of testimony of excessive profits derived by aircraft companies through Navy contracts. (See Story on Page Two.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Chairman McKellar, of the Senate Postoffice Committee, told the Senate today that the Black ocean and air mail investigating committee had shown "scandalous operations" in connection with government subsidies and predicted President Roosevelt in due time would act under his existing authority to nullify some of the mail contracts.

Meanwhile, as the investigation itself proceeded, the Senate Committee was given testimony by W. E. Boeing, chairman of the United Aircraft and Transport Corp., that he exchanged Boeing Air Transport Company stock that had cost $350,259 for United shares which reached a market value of $8,905,464 in 1929.

While Boeing was on the stand, Chairman Black questioned him as to the importance of aluminum in the manufacture of airplanes. Black introduced a letter from Boeing suggesting a "tie-up" with the Aluminum Company.

ALUMINUM SOURCE

In the letter, Boeing referred to the company as the "sole source of supply."

Chairman Black also questioned the witness as to profits of United subsidiaries from government orders.

Referring to $2,000,000 of Army business in 1931, the chairman said records showed a profit of 43.31 per cent to the Boeing Airplane Manufacturing Company.

Pratt and Whitney Aircraft, another subsidiary, made 81.71 per cent profits on government contracts in 1930, Black said, reading from records.

Black asked if "in the main" Pratt and Whitney's money had

PARIS, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Troops were called out today to reinforce the police battling with a mob in the Place de la Concorde across from the Chamber of Deputies.

By WILLIAM PARKER
International News Service.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—The 7-day-old government of Premier Edouard Daladier, beset with serious disturbances in Paris as an outgrowth of the $40,000,000 Stavisky financial scandal, won a victory in its first test of strength in the Chamber of Deputies this evening.

The Chamber voted confidence in the Daladier ministry, 300 to 217.

The precarious situation in which the government finds itself, however, is shown by the fact that 93 deputies, sufficient to force the cabinet's resignation, abstained from casting their ballots.

Strictest police and military precautions continued throughout the capital as darkness approached. Seven o'clock was the hour fixed by radical demonstrators for inauguration of a subway and motorbus strike, which it is feared will be accompanied by disorder.

British Peer Links Wife, Fairbanks In Divorce Suit

LONDON, Feb. 6. — (AP.) — Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., American film star, was served notice today that he has been named as co-respondent in a divorce action instituted by young Lord Ashley against the doll-like Lady Ashley.

The lord secluded himself at Swindon, 70 miles from London.

There the 33-year-old son and heir of the ninth Earl of Shaftesbury waited the serving of the petition on Lady Ashley and the American actor and had "nothing to say at this time."

A representative said Fairbanks was in seclusion, but the matter of serving the notice on Fairbanks constituted no difficulty, for "Doug is too much of a gentleman ever to think of dodging the service of papers."

GOING TO SPAIN

The representative added that the movie actor would leave England at the end of the week with Alexander Korda, film director, to look over the location for a film play which Fairbanks plans to start making in Spain in about three weeks.

Despite the assurances that

GUNGIRL AGAIN IN LAW'S TOILS

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 6.—Isabelle Messner, Pittsburgh's two-gun girl, got herself into another jam today.

Isabelle, arrested in a Miami restaurant, was charged with carrying concealed weapons. A policeman said she was trying to take an automatic pistol from her purse when he knocked it from her hand.

This is not a new experience for little Isabelle, once a carnival tap dancer. She was arrested in Miami a few weeks later as a holdup suspect. She "beat the rap," as she had done in Pittsburgh, where she was paroled after being found with a couple of pistols in her purse.

PARIS, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—An anarchist, armed with a dagger, was arrested at the entrance to the Chamber of Deputies tonight, according to Le Temps.

River Steamers Brave Frozen Water at Point

For the first time in several years the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers were frozen over near the Point today.

Absence of wind and of moving craft in the harbor, coupled with a low temperature of 12 degrees, allowed the ice to form, Weather Observer W. S. Brotzman said. The ice was broken when boats began operating.

Heavy ice abounds in the upper Allegheny, with a gorge at Parkers Landing. A rise in the river would fill the stream with ice, the weatherman said.

The unexpected drop of the mercury here was due to a fast-moving high pressure area that swept in from the Northwest and centered over this region early today. Fair skies, with rising temperature, were predicted for tomorrow.

'Babies' in Seized Cart Are Moonshine Twins

In a baby carriage, built for twins, which a Juvenile Court ward was pushing in Beechwood boulevard at 2 a. m. today, police found two five-gallon cans of moonshine, they reported.

Peter Kazimier, 18, of 142 Second avenue, Homestead, admitted in Morals Court that he was the pusher and said he stole the moonshine from the home of L. S. Klee, 57, of 5658 Melvin street.

Kazimier was turned over to his parole officer and Klee, whose home was raided after Kazimier was arrested, was turned over to state revenue officers after he admitted the liquor was his. Klee asserted it was for his own use.

Radio Patrolmen John White and Richard Kearns, of the Oakland station, explained they stopped the youth only to assist him.

The liquor, the officers said, was tucked under the blankets where the twins should have been.

RUM SUSPECTS ABSOLVED BY REPEAL

250 in District Freed By Supreme Court Decision

The decision of the Supreme Court yesterday wiping out pending federal prohibition cases under the Eighteenth Amendment, will mean the quashing of more than 100 liquor cases on the dockets of the Federal District Court, involving between 250 and 300 defendants, according to government officials here.

United States Attorney H. S. Dumbauld for the Western District of Pennsylvania, will not comment on the decision until he receives a copy of the mandate of the highest court. No trials in liquor cases have been held in the District Court here since the beginning of the November term of court, such prosecutions having been set aside pending the decision of the Supreme Court.

MAY QUASH CHARGES

As the decision to quash also includes cases in which appeals from convictions are pending, it is interpreted here to mean the quashing of the indictment on which 20 men were convicted of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law, mainly upon the testimony of Roxie Long. The alleged conspiracy was drawn under a criminal code, but allegations are based on violations of the prohibition law. Their appeal to the Circuit Cout has been pending for several months.

Several other indictments charging conspiracy to violate the liquor law have been on the dockets awaiting trial. One involves Archie Negelman, a former prohibition agent, and 40 defendants, and another, William J. Flood, a Bridgeville police officer, and 27 others. Due to the discontinuance of prosecutions of liquor cases at the November term of court there are at present not more than 20 government prisoners in county jails in this district.

President's Pardon Sought in Rum Cases

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—A new effort to obtain presidential pardon for prohibition law violators in federal prisons was inaugurated today as a result of the Supreme Court's ruling that all pending cases were wiped out by repeal.

The action of the high court resulted in saving thousands from prison, and the logical next step is to free the thousands already in prison for the same offense.

Representative Clarence McLeod (Rep.), of Michigan, who has pending in Congress a resolution calling upon the President to pardon prohibition law violators, is going to renew his efforts.

THIRD CHOSEN FOR RUM BOARD

HARRISBURG, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot has decided upon the third member of the State Liquor Control Board and will announce his appointee within a week, persons close to the executive office said today.

During the Governor's absence, due to illness, his aides have been kept busy receiving applicants for that and other lucrative positions under the administration.

The liquor board vacancy has existed since the board was created two months ago. A scramble for the job started soon after former Representative Thomas W. Phillips, of Butler, declined the appointment. More than 20 men are seeking the post. Present members of the board are Robert W. Gathrop, of West Chester, and A. Marshall Thompson, of Pittsburgh.

M'CLURE FATE DEBATED

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 6.—Conflicting informal opinions were heard throughout Philadelphia court circles today as to the effect the Supreme Court's decision will have on the status of the trial and conviction of State Senator John J. McClure and his 54 co-defendants.

On one side, the majority of legal minds held that Senator McClure and his co-conspirators will go free. This faction believes that the convictions, now on appeal, will not be reviewed, as a result of the Supreme Court's ruling which wipes from the judicial slates all pending federal prohibition cases.

On the other side, a lesser number expressed belief that the high court's decision does not apply to the Delaware County rum-graft conspiracy case. In the opinion of the latter group the McClure case does not come under the prohibition laws because the defendants were tried an convicted on charges of conspiracy to evade the laws.

PLANETARIUM WANTED HERE

Pittsburgh may have a planetarium, if plans of Congressman J. Twing Brooks are successful.

Brooks yesterday dropped in on Mayor McNair to tell him he was going to apply for PWA funds for the project.

The planetarium, an exact and moving model of the heavens, would be located on the North Side near the observatory, Brooks said. He estimated the cost at about $200,000.

The project would be self-liquidating through admission fees. School children would be admitted free.

McNair said he approved of the plan if it didn't necessitate the city's issuing bonds. Both McNair and Brooks cited the residence of the late Dr. John A. Brashear, in Pittsburgh, as strengthening a claim to the loan.

While New York has made a similar application, only Chicago and Philadelphia now possess planetariums.

ROOSEVELT MAY ACT IN QUIZ

"come directly from government orders."

RECORDS OF PROFITS

The witness agreed with records introduced by Black showing Pratt and Whitney in the five years, 1928-1932, paid dividends totaling $12,045,549 and bonuses of $1,247,100. Executive salaries were $629,766, he testified. Boeing said:

"Mr. Chairman, remember that this was a life work with me. People thought I was a fool at times."

Black asked:

"They don't think that now, do they?"

Boeing said:

"It may be the reward for a lifetime's work."

He was then referring to his testimony that his total emoluments from United Aircraft services and stock dealings were $12,199,000.

Boeing was called following the summoning of four persons to appear before the Senate bar Friday to show cause why they should not be held in contempt for having destroyed and removed correspondence under subpena by the committee.

BANKER'S NOTE SCORED PRIEST

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—A memorandum from Donald N. Sweeney, a Detroit banker, saying radio addresses by Father Charles E. Coughlin were "sufficient to incite a bank run" was read to the Senate Bank Investigating Committee today by Ferdinand Pecora, its counsel.

The memorandum, sent to Pecora in January, 1933, added that Coughlin's discouses showed a "growing tendency to radicalism."

It also said the priest was speaking before audiences "incapable of drawing differentiations" and said this was particularly true in not distinguishing between "bankers" and "international bankers."

The memorandum said the discourses might not seem harmful in reading them but "when enunciated" by Father Coughlin were "sufficient to incite a bank run."

ADAMS CALLED BY NAVY AIR PROBERS

Facts on Contracts For Planes Wanted By House Group

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—A House naval affairs subcommittee decided today to call Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy, and two of his assistants to find out what they know about airplane contracts on which it has been told profits of as much as 50 per cent were made.

The assistants are David S. Ingalls, assistant secretary for aeronautics from 1929 to 1932, and Edward P. Warner, who held the same post from 1926 until 1929.

The decision was reached after Chairman Delaney, of the group investigating navy airplane and engine contracts, concluded that present officials of the Navy had no direct knowledge of contracts awarded before last March.

TESTIMONY INVITED

Even Rear Admiral Ernest J. King, now chief of the Navy's aeronautic bureau, could not furnish the desired information, because he did not take his present post until Rear Admiral William A. Moffet died when the airship Akron dropped into the Atlantic in April, 1933.

Also by unanimous action, the committee decided to invite more than a score of airplane and engine builders who have had contracts with the Navy since the Wilson administration.

Delaney said to newspapermen:

"The committee has no power to subpena, or to compel the presence of anyone. But it seems to me that if the persons invited are loyal, patriotic American citizens, they will be anxious to appear."

AUDIT DATA CITED

The Navy's special audit showed airplane and engine makers made bigger profits on commercial than on Army and Navy business.

From 1927 through 1933, King testified, Pratt-Whitney's profit on Navy engines averaged 36 per cent while its commercial profit was 71.

In the same period, Wright averaged 5 per cent on Navy and 3 per cent on commercial sales.

He explained the Navy had allowed Pratt-Whitney to make 50 per cent on a $10,000,000 engine order so as to keep Wright "in business." King explained:

"If we had forced down the price, Wright would have gone out of business, gone broke."

OPPOSITION HINTED

The steel company has indicated that it will oppose the Labor Board's effort to learn the workers' sentiment from the outset.

Steel officials may seek an injunction to prevent a poll.

An International News Service dispatch from Washington quoted a Labor Board official as saying the poll could be made without a list of the employes, but that such a list would speed the canvass. He added:

"We have not yet determined on a definite plan for taking the poll, but we are determined that it shall be taken, and that it be decisive."

If the poll shows the workers favor representation by another union, the Labor Board proposes to conduct a new election in the mills over the protests of the steel company.

The task of Handler and Dewey is to make preparations for the poll. Handler said he did not know when it would begin. Labor Board officials in Washington were quoted as saying they expected to start within two or three days.

CONGRESS ACTION HINTED

The Labor Board contends the company union election of employe representatives in December violated the collective bargaining provision of the recovery act. The steel industry has taken the position that the board will violate the act if it upsets the rules laid down by the company union, which the Weirton company claims is truly representative of its employes.

Dispatches from Washington said legislation will be introduced in Congress to divorce the Labor Board from domination of the NRA and to put teeth in the labor provisions in the recovery act.

It was said President Roosevelt will issue another executive order further clarifying application of the labor provisions.

ARMY SUPPLY PROBE CALLS DERN AIDE

War Secretary Turns U. S. Sleuths Loose On Lobbyists

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Secretary Dern said today he had asked the Department of Justice to investigate thoroughly all rumors concerning lobbyists with alleged influence in War Department sales, purchases, or other activities, and lobbying on War Department matters before Congress.

He made this statement to newspapermen as the District of Columbia grand jury began an investigation of an alleged conspiracy to defraud the government of more than $2,000,000 in connection with the purchase with public works funds of 4,000 motor trucks.

The chief witness questioned by the Grand Jury was Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war, who last night issued an order barring Joseph Silverman, a Washington and New York dealer in Army surpluses, from the War Department.

All information gathered by the War Department during an investigation covering several weeks has been turned over to the Justice Department.

It is understood the entire matter will be taken before the Grand Jury for possible indictments.

In a statement, Dern said:

"We are jealous of the good name of the War Department, and it is our desire that all this undercover talk about alleged influence be brought out into the open and the entire matter thoroughly aired."

Dern refused to make any comment on the action of Woodring, in whose office Army purchases are made, in barring Silverman from the War Department.

It was understood that Silverman had acted as agent for automobile and truck companies submitting bids to the government here. These bids were opened some time ago, but award of contracts was held up by the War Department pending an investigation.

A number of Indianapolis and Detroit manufacturers have been requested by the Justice Department to appear before the grand jury. Their names were not disclosed.

management as striking employes walked up and down with signs, "Strike on against pay cut and working conditions."

An effort was being made to call out the employes of the Fort Pitt Hotel.

SERVICE HELD NORMAL

F. L. Andrews, manager of the William Penn, said dining room and luncheon service had been restored to normal.

Edna Spence, 29, of 330 May street, Castle Shannon, described as a former employe of the hotel, arrested on a disorderly conduct charge, was freed by Magistrate Howard B. McNutt in Central Police Court. Police testified she had shoved two workers as they left the hotel. She admitted picketing, but denied shoving.

Harry Reich, 23, of 1110 Bedford avenue, said by police to have Communist affiliations, also was discharged by Magistrate McNutt. He told the magistrate he would obey the law and wouldn't loiter near the hotel. Police said he refused to move on and was giving instructions to strikers.

FEDERATION LINK DENIED

At a meeting following his arrest, Reich told strikers at 220 Stanwix street:

"In local headquarters of the American Federation of Labor there is a sign saying, 'Hands off the William Penn Strike.' This means they are behind us 100 per cent."

John Hoehn, secretary for Pennsylvania of the American Federation of Labor, declared the strikers have no connection with the federation. The strikers are all members of Local 115, Hotel and Restaurant Workers' Union, according to John Bookjans, secretary of Local 237, Hotel and Restaurant Employes.

MRS. GAYLORD SAUNDERS

HINT INSANITY IN $10 MURDER

International News Service.

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 6.—An insanity plea is expected to be the defense of Mrs. Neoma Saunders, frail invalid, widow, held with three others in the $10 murder of her husband, Gaylord V. Saunders, former Methodist minister of Wabash, Prosecutor Herbert E. Wilson, of Marion County, indicated today.

The prosecutor took cognizance of the statement of the Saunders' family physician at Wabash, Dr. L. B. Rhamy, reporting that Mrs. Saunders had talked of poisoning or shooting her husband when the physician was summoned to the manse on the night of January 19 to treat the pastor for intoxication and was told the pastor had beaten up both his wife and her nurse, Mrs. Mabel Blake, and had made two suicide attempts. The physician expressed his opinion that Saunders had been insane.

Mrs. Saunders confessed she paid $10 to Ted Mathers, 19, to do away with her husband. Young Mathers is held as the triggerman in the slaying, and his pal, Masil Roe, 19, as the driver of the car in which Saunders' body was found.

WARNS BANKERS TO AID TRADE

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has warned banks and bankers they must assume their full share in the recovery program.

Addressing the sixth mid-winter meeting of the New York State Bankers' Association yesterday, Jones told his audience if they failed to provide proper credit for private enterprise, "there can be but one alternative—government lending." He said:

"I would be less than frank if I did not say the President would be greatly disappointed if the banks do not perform all their functions."

The government has no thought of dictating management of banks, he said. He called his address "an appeal to follow the President's lead."

About 500 bankers attended the meeting.

Mary Pickford Mum On Fairbanks Suit

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Mary Pickford, estranged wife of Douglas Fairbanks, today declined to comment on the proposed naming of her actor husband as corespondent in a divorce suit being brought in London by Lord Ashley.

DOUG FAIRBANKS NAMED BY PEER IN DIVORCE

Mary Pickford's Mate, British 'Doll Lady' Linked in Romance

Fairbanks was in seclusion, it was reported that he had been seen emerging from a garage next to his house on Aldford street at noon to be whisked away in an automobile.

This report was denied by Tom Geraghty, his press representative, who said:

"I probably am closer than anybody to Doug and I know he is not in town. The two men emerging from the garage were probably two other fellows. They probably were his business manager and his secretary, who have offices there."

CONTRASTING BEAUTIES

Lady Ashley and Mary Pickford are two distinct and contrasting types of beauty. As for Lord Ashley, the heir to an earldom dating back nine generations, he is a serious, sober-faced youth with a drooping military mustache. It is not a heavyweight Victorian mustache, but a modern Sandhurst Military College model.

Londoners, as they read the lengthy accounts of the divorce proceedings in their newspapers, recalled the Fairbanks-Pickford romance and the spacious days of the Pickfair estate at Beverly Hills when England's aristocracy were proud to be among the guests at the Fairbanks' party.

'IDEAL SWEETHEARTS'

To England, Doug and Mary were the world's ideal sweethearts and the exception to the generalities of Hollywood divorces.

During those happy days, whenever Fairbanks visited England he reveled in the role of the henpecked husband, calling Mary "my boss." Then he said he wanted to live in England six months in the year and in California the other six months, but that his "boss" insisted on working all the time.

Lord Ashley, whose family is one of the most impressive in England, was educated at Eton and the Royal Military College at Sandhurst—which is the English West Point—and at Cambridge University. He is a member of the Marlborough Club in London, a haunt of the late King Edward.

ESTRANGED SINCE 1928

He and his pretty, brown-haired wife, the former Sylvia Hawkes of the stage, have been estranged since January, 1928, after less than a year of wedded life.

She and Lord Ashley were married after his father, former president of the English Church Union, issued a statement that there would be no wedding.

The parents made a dramatic motorcab dash to London on the day of the wedding in an eleventh hour effort to halt the ceremony.

Fairbanks has been in London off and on ever since Mary Pickford started her divorce [illegible] against him in December.

During the early [illegible] toured Southern Europe [illegible] returned to London six [illegible] and completed arrangements [illegible] taking a leading role [illegible] British-made films.

SEEN AT PARTIES

Fairbanks and Lady Ashley have been reported seen frequently at parties in London's West End, often with Douglas, Jr., and Gertrude Lawrence, popular musical comedy star.

Young Fairbanks told The Daily Mail yesterday that he and Miss Lawrence had "discussed marriage, but have taken no decision."

News of the filing of the suit created a sensation in London society, particularly in view of the conservative traditions of Lord Ashley's family and there was considerable speculation whether either defendant would elect to contest the case.

If there is a contest the case will probably not come before the courts for several months. The defendants have eight days in which to enter an appearance. If the case is uncontested it might come to trial as early as April 12.

ELDER DOUG QUIET

A few nights ago, Fairbanks and his son, with Lady Ashley and Miss Lawrence, were the centers of attention at the opening of a midnight revue at a leading London hotel.

Sitting across the dance floor at another table with a number of friends, the younger Fairbanks and his companion were the life of their party, and danced frequently.

Lady Ashley is of medium height and slender. She has been described as a vivacious beauty.

'DARING' LADY ASHLEY

She is usually referred to as the "daring" or "sensational" Lady Ashley by Fleet street columnists.

She has given staid friends of her father-in-law's famous family many shocks and London at large many thrills.

Douglas Fairbanks is 17 years Lord Ashley's senior.

He and Miss Anna Beth Sully, of Providence, R. I., were married July 11, 1907. Their son, Douglas, Jr., also is an actor and recently was divorced from Joan Crawford of the films.

After a divorce in 1918, Fairbanks and Mary Pickford were married March 28, 1920.

Difficulties developed, however, and after Fairbanks had made a number of extended trips abroad, it finally became apparent the couple was on the verge of a rift.

Still Miss Pickford's suit for divorce December 8 was a sensation. She charged mental cruelty, neglect and indifference.

COX FLAYS NRA CODE CHISELING

Charging that the local compliance board was working under the narrow confines of a Pittsburgh viewpoint rather than the broad NRA plan, the Rev. James R. Cox today had warned that the "chisler in industries and trades must go."

Father Cox made the charge last night before a code meeting of the Greater Pittsburgh Garage Association in Webster Hall. He said:

"I don't care who hears me. The compliance board is not working for the interest of the NRA. When complaints are received, the board is failing to act in the broad terms of the NRA. Instead, it acts in the terms of a Pittsburgh viewpoint. Code 'chislers' must be eliminated for the good of the NRA."

Millard C. Dorntge, of Buffalo, and former president of the International Garage Association, outlined the terms of the parking garage code. He warned that an operator failing to sign an agreement of assent would not escape having to obey the code. The failure, however, would deprive the operator of a voice in actions of the local, state and national code authorities.

Lester Bernstein, commercial consulting engineer, and Judge Eugene C. Bonniwell, of Philadelphia, also spoke.

PWA JOBS HERE SPEEDED

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—Prospects of engineering approval for Allegheny County projects were strengthened today following a conference between Eugene Hunting, representing the Pennsylvania Public Works state engineer's office, and engineers of the Public Works Administration here.

Hunting supplied the Public Works division with additional data on the Allegheny projects, facilitating a complete report by the engineering division. This report, it is understood, will be completed in about 10 days and, on the basis of information now available, will be favorable from an engineering viewpoint. The projects must also be approved by the financial and legal divisions of the PWA and the outcome of their studies was not predictable.

The early transmission of the engineers' findings, however, indicated that action by the PWA would be taken in the near future. After this stage is reached, the principal uncertainty involved will be the amount of Public Works money available as the total advances necessary for the approximately 15 projects is $25,000,000. At present, the Public Works treasury is empty except for occasional withdrawals from other projects.

Gershwin on Night Off Here Dials Jerome Kern

Gershwin started something at the breakfast table this morning in Hote Schenley when he mentioned Kern. James Melton, the singer who is appearing with him and Leo Reisman's orchestra under the direction of Charles Previn tonight in Syria Mosque, declared his favorite singer is Lawrence Tibbett.

But, said Charles Previn:

"There's really only one conductor and he's Toscanini."

There you have the favorites of the favorites.

Gershwin, a bit tired after appearing in 24 cities in as many days, hopes to see the day when "jazz" is no longer in the American vocabulary. He said:

"We're sure to have advances in popular music; they will come gradually, but I hope they don't get labled jazz."

This man who rose to musical heights from Tin Pan Alley gave out this pointer on musical appreciation:

"Anybody can enjoy classical, but never so much as when he has studied it."

Murder in Radio Studio Interrupts Broadcast

International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—In an unprogrammed drama of the air a real murder was broadcast from Station KHJ here, and Edwin Wolverton, 21, of Grand Junction, Col., was dead today, victim of a knife wielded by Clarence Walter, 43, Montana wheatfield worker.

Walter was overpowered and booked on a charge of suspicion of murder after a terrific struggle near the broadcast microphone.

He menaced a pretty girl secretary, Grace Kane, while 150 women were in a nearby room listening to Mona Van Dyke give a Science Club broadcast.

In a terrific battle Walter stabbed Wolverton, who sank to the floor, a tiny fatal cut in his brain.

Warren Fehlman, advertising man, leaped on Walter and was cut about the head before a dozen men subdued the knife wielder.

Screams cut into the sound waves and puzzled KHJ listeners, but Miss Van Dyke raised her voice above the turmoil, continuing her broadcast without a break.

Walter said he had written several letters to the studio asking for a job.

FOSTER PARENT WINS COURT RULING

Indentity of Principals Cloaked in Secrecy By Judges

A young woman who wanted back the baby she abandoned was refused today by the courts.

She asked that her baby daughter, born in August, 1932, be taken from the foster mother.

But three men—judges all—sitting in judgment on the two women, decided that the baby, Marilyn, would have a better home with the foster mother.

In an 11-page opinion handed down today the jurists referred to the child only as Marilyn, to her mother simply as Dorothy. The full name of neither mother was mentioned.

COURT'S OPINION

The opinion recited how Dorothy had come to Pittsburgh from a neighboring state so that her parents would not know of her plight, how when she finally returned no one suspected she had become a mother.

And the court added:

"The material welfare of the child would not be an inducement to a decree of adoption if we could know that demoralization or depravity would be the result."

The child was born in the Salvation Army Home in Bellevue, August 5, 1932, and on September 28 Dorothy abandoned her baby.

'DOROTHY'S' STORY

In testifying before Judge Thomas P. Trimble last year, when she began her action to recover the child, Dorothy admitted she realized she was signing away her baby when she signed adoption papers. But, she explained, she thought then she could do nothing else.

Today's opinion was in denial to exceptions filed by Dorothy's counsel against the original ruling of Judge Trimble, which was upheld today. Besides Judge Trimble, Judges H. Walton Mitchell and Edward C. Chalfant reviewed the case.

'I'm Not Greta Garbo'

MRS. FRED SIEBEL, JR. . . . . SHE HAD HER RADIO REPAIRED

Mrs. Siebel, the woman whose presence on the eastbound Manhattan Limited set flying stories that Greta Garbo was traveling incognito—apparently to join Rouben Mamoulian in the East. Mrs. Siebel, en route to the brewers' convention: "But come in, anyhow, and have a glass of cold beer." This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

BREWERS FOUND ON TRAIN, BUT NO GARBO

Identity Error Bared Here; Mamoulian Denies Romance

Pittsburgh today was added to the list of cities in which Greta Garbo wasn't.

The elusive Swede was reported en route East with or without Rouben Mamoulian, the disappearing Hollywood director.

But in the reputed Garbo car on the Manhattan Limited, instead of a mysterious movie star, was a party of brewers, bound for a convention.

Mamoulian, found passing through Cleveland, once more said he was merely bound East on business.

The brewers explained all. Mrs. Dorothy Siebel, Chicago matron, had called a radio repairman at Lima, O. The repairman had called her Garbo. One word, in Lima, led to another, and soon the country was in a fever.

Meanwhile, in Hollywood, a friend said Greta was in her home with a slight illness. But Greta herself could not be reached.

As to Mamoulian, he repeated he had no intention of marrying Miss Garbo.

Mamoulian Silent On Garbo Rumors

Great Garbo did not come.

To interviewers who questioned him concerning rumors he was engaged to the cinema star, Mamoulian was especially illuminating, answering questions with:

"No" and "I wouldn't know about that."

The conversation ran something like this:

"Do you know where Miss Garbo is?"
"No."
"Is she coming to New York?"
"I wouldn't know about that."
"Where is Mis Garbo now?"
"I wonder."

Mamoulian had a vague idea that Miss Garbo was still in Hollywood.

He is in New York to see the shows, he said, and to confer with Samuel Goldwyn, producer, about some pictures.

ROCKEFELLER SCION TO WED, GETS JOB

By JOHN KOBLER
Universal Service,

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The engagement of Winthrop Rockefeller, 22, youngest son of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Miss Elizabeth Shallcross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Fleetwood Shallcross, of New York, is due to be announced formally in the spring, Universal Service learned from friends of the prospective bridegroom's family.

Winthrop, who is "Win" to his friends, already has acquired a job in preparation for being a husband and breadwinner, in accordance with the Rockefeller tradition. He left Yale University, where he was a junior, last Tuesday, to begin at the bottom as a truck driver n Bayonne, N. J., where the Standard Oil Company has one of its largest refineries.

GIRL ON WAY TO CHINA

Friends quoted his as saying:

"I am getting nothing out of college."

Miss Shallcross, who is 20, is now on her way to China, in company with Miss Margaret Millbank, daughter of Jeremiah Millbank, and a chaperon. The formal announcement is scheduled to be made when she returns in the spring.

The Shallcross town house is at 136 East Sixty-sixth street. Her father, Cecil Shallcross, who wed Laura M. Post, is English-born. He became a naturalized American in 1908 and is president of a New York insurance company. There is one other child, John, a student at Groton.

FEARS OF ABDUCTION

Winthrop's two brothers are married. John D. III wed Blanchett Hooker, and Nelson married Mary T. Clark.

There are some misgivings in the family about Winthrop going to work as a truck driver, Universal Service was told, because of several supposed attempts to abduct him made in the last two years.

It will not be the first time he has devoted himself to manual labor. He spent the summer vacation working for the Standard Oil Company in Bayonne. During this time he lived in a room costing less than $10 a week at the local Y. M. C. A.

RESIGNATION CONFIRMED

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 6.—(Universal.)—The executive offices of Yale University confirmed the fact that Winthrop Rockefeller has left the university without completing his course by stating that he resigned.

Young Rockefeller originally entered the class of 1935, as a candidate for an M. A. degree. When he returned to the college last semester, he was entered in the class of 1936.

NEW NUMBERS OFFICE IN AUTO

Herbert (Kid) Angel, big shot numbers man of the Hill deprived of headquarters by police raids, now makes his rounds in a luxurious automobile, a Negro pickup man testified in Morals Court today.

The admitted numbers writer, Will Jackson, Negro, of 114 Crawford street, was arrested in a raid on a Clark street disorderly house last night. He was fined $10 or 10 days in jail by Magistrate Howard B. McNutt.

Patrolman Daniel Owens testified that Jackson had told him:

"I write for Herbert Angel and if he doesn't come down and pay my fine I'm going to make information against him, charging him with operating a lottery."

Questioned by the Magistrate, the defendant testified he met Angel, who rode in a big car, on street corners to turn in his money and slips. Business is slow at present, Jackson related, and instead of doing $10 to $12 a day he was writing only $2 to $3 a day.

Two Negro girls arrested in the raid were held over. Five Negroes and one white man were discharged.

BREMER KIDNAP ARRESTS VAIN

ST. PAUL, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—The authorities have struck, but without success, in an initial effort to solve the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward Bremer, wealthy banker, abducted January 17.

Eleven man, carrying $4,000, were arrested yesterday and last night at Owatonna, Minn., in the hope they might furnish information leading to a solution of the case, but Chief of Police Thomas Dahill announced after questioning them that he was convinced they had no connection with Bremer's abduction.

Dahill said one automatic pistol was found among the gang when they were captured in an apartment house in which they had been living since January 10.

Walter Magee, wealthy contractor or friend of the missing banker, whose blood-stained automobile was found abandoned shortly after his abduction last month, declared the ransom money in $5 and $10 bills had not been paid. The family still awaited communication from the gang, hopeful some sign would be conveyed to them soon that would convince them the 37-year-old banker was alive.

A rescue party, struggling through the avalanche drifts which claimed the lives of 35 persons over the week-end, found the Orsini lodge covered with snow. All three lay dead in bed.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Men occasionally are sued for not marrying women.

Today, however, Wesley H. Arnett, an accountant, was sued for $25,000 by his wife, pretty Dorothy Arnett, 26, because he did marry her.

CONVICT TALKS IN OWN DEFENSE

Lawrence Clark, 35, accused of killing a fellow prisoner in Western Penitentiary, testified today that he had stabbed Wayne C. Cobb, 35, in self-defense.

Clark testified that Cobb attacked him with a knife in the prison yard, and that in grappling Cobb lost the knife.

William R. Hall, 60, an ex-horsethief who has spent 25 years in prison on various charges and cannot get a parole before 1939, testified for Clark. He said Cobb told him he wanted a knife to kill Clark.

Eleven prisoners have been taken from the penitentiary and, under guard, will be brought into the courtroom, one by one, to testify. The defense has decided not to call Robert Considine, internationally-known thief.

Clark, from Youngstown, O., is serving five years for burglary. Cobb, from Glendennon, W. Va., was doing 10 years for burglary.

Testimony brought out that Cobb had attended Carnegie Tech in 1921 under the name of James Boyer.

Mother Sentenced In 'Mercy' Slaying

MERCER, Pa., Feb. 6.—Mrs. Mary Zitnyar, 28, of Sharon, who confessed she strangled to death her 2-year-old son, Rudolph, in 1930, because he was paralyzed, today pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter. She was sentenced to the State Industrial Home for Women at Muncy by Judge J. A. McLaughry.

Repeating her confession in court she claimed she strangled the boy after five physicians told her that he never would recover.

SLAIN DOCTOR'S KIN ON STAND

International News Service.

GREENWOOD, Miss., Feb. 6.—Dr. Henry Kennedy, brother of Dr. J. Preston Kennedy, eminent surgeon, took the stand for a second time today in the "whisky highball murder" trial of Dr. Sara Ruth Dean to tell a Delta jury of the accusation of murder Kennedy hurled at his comely medical associate as he lay lying of mercury poison.

Judge S. F. Davis allowed admission of the purported deathbed declaration after a two-hour battle in which the defense battery sought desperately to bar it as evidence.

The Jackson dentist took the stand to reiterate his lengthy testimony of yesterday afternoon in which he told of the surgeon calling him and a brother, Barney Kennedy, into his hospital room and charging that Dr. Dean had given him a highball containing mercurial poison.

He was born in Salem, O., and was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church of Salem. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Howard W. Braun, of Pittsburgh, and Miss Marjorie May Bell, of Salem, a son, John, and a sister Mrs. George J. Wright, of Pittsburgh. Funeral services will be held at the late home at 3:15 tomorrow night. Burial will be in Grandview Cemetery at Salem.

Historic Old Home Swept by Flames

VALLEY FORGE, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Fire has destroyed all but the walls of the historic home of Charles W. Walker, which once served as headquarters for Gen. Lafayette.

Built in 1732, the 15-room house overlooking Valley Forge Park, burned late yesterday despite the efforts of several fire companies. Among the objects destroyed was the original deed to the property, signed by William Penn. Loss was estimated at $220,000.

3 TOMS' TRIAL RULING MONDAY

A ruling in Criminal Court is expected to determine next Monday whether the "Three Toms"—Coyne, Dolan and Goslin—will go on trial on a liquor charge.

The three indicted in the Monaca Club case are slated for trial Monday on charges of violating the Snyder act and operating a gambling house. Attorney John Duggan, Jr., counsel for Coyne, moved to quash the liquor charge on the ground that the new liquor act repeals the Snyder act.

A full bench of judges heard arguments on the motion to quash. Their decision will have a bearing on all pending prosecutions under the Snyder act.

She was a member of the National Archery Association, the Ben Avon Young Women's Christian Association and the Christian Science Church of Bellevue. Funeral services will be from her late home, Thursday afternoon. Burial will be in Homewood Cemetery.

COLUMBUS, O., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Gov. George White declined today to intervene in the case of Albert Bruno, 25, of Pittsburgh, scheduled to die in the electric chair tonight.

He refused upon the unanimous recommendation of the board of paroles.

Bruno, who was convicted of participating in the slaying of John McLaughlin, Toledo hotel clerk, March 28, 1933, did not make a special request for his last meal.

Frank Vacchiano, 25, of Dayton, was electrocuted December 29 for participation in the slaying of McLaughlin.

Judge Philip Sullivan extended the writ with the consent of all parties, including the British government, which seeks to prosecute Factor on a $7,000,000 swindling charge.

Girl Bitten, Court Dooms Four Dogs to Die

M'GRAW, N. Y. Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Four dogs, which attacked and mangled a 6-year-old girl, were sentenced to death today by a Justice of the Peace who held court for them. The four, however, were given reprieves until February 15, or until the danger period of rabies passes.

The defendants were Curley, a shepherd; Pal, a police dog; Jack, a mongrel, and Sport, a bulldog. They were charged with biting 6-year-old Joyce Hammond while she was on her way home from school last Wednesday so badly there was danger today of her losing her right arm. She is in a hospital.

"Arrested" by state police, the dogs were ordered confined by their owners until today's proceedings.

Rudy Branded as 'Spy' By Fay's Attorney

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Attorneys in the Fay Webb-Rudy Vallee tangle came to an agreement yesterday by which Mrs. Vallee will withhold further action in California to obtain $7,450 a month maintenance from the orchestra leader until a judge here acts on Vallee's application to restrain the suit.

The agreement came after Supreme Court Justice Bernard L. Shientag took Vallee's application under advisement along with a request to amend his answer to his estranged wife's suit here to restrain him from obtaining a divorce.

Mrs. Vallee's California suit, in which she asks $50,000 counsel fees and $10,000 court costs in addition to the maintenance, was called "vexatious, harassing and sinister" by Samuel Gottlieb, Vallee's counsel.

The action is for coercive and extortionate claims based on unworthy motives, explained at the injunction hearing.

Mrs. Vallee's attorney, Benjamin Hartstein, countered with an attack on the separation agreement by which the singer paid his wife $100 a week. He repeated Mrs. Vallee's claim that she had no lawyer when she signed it, declaring:

"The defendant was spying on his wife under the guise of a dutiful husband. After the little business I say there is enough money in the state New York to settle this case til all the facts have been disclosed in court."

EVANS WHISPER SWAYS ACTION IN COUNCIL

A new note has been struck in the drama at City Hall with George E. Evans, member of Mayor McNair's inner circle of advisers, playing a mysterious role.

With the scene all set in Council yesterday for the approval of the Mayor's appointment of Attorney W. E. Schoyer to the Traction Conference Board and dismissal of W. Edgar Reed, Evans appeared as a sort of tenth councilman and held a whispered conversation with President of Council Robert Garland.

The result was that Garland announced that at the request of City Solicitor Cornelius D. Scully the Schoyer appointment and the Reed dismissal would be held up temporarily pending a revision of the communication.

DENIAL BY SCULLY

Garland later said that Evans had made the request for Scully.

Evans, who withdrew from the Democratic Council ticket on the eve of the great landslide, bears the distinction of coming nearer being a councilman than anyone who was not actually elected.

When reporters sought Scully later, the City Solicitor denied having any part in the affair. He said:

"I have made no request for delay in the Schoyer appointment, either directly or indirectly."

Mayor McNair was hunted up and expressed concern about what was happening to his appointments, but said he knew nothing about the delay.

EVANS EVASIVE

Evans, questioned last night, said first:

"I don't want to say anything about it."

Pressed for information whether he had not asked President Garland for the delay, he said:

"I was acting for Mr. Scully."

Told that Scully disclaimed all connection with it, he said:

"I was acting as messenger for another party, and I know nothing about it."

As Evans and Schoyer are close personal friends, the latest city hall intrigue apparently runs deeper beneath the surface than the blocking of Schoyer. There are other positions on the Traction Conference Board which might be made vacant and filled if the Mayor and Council decided to do it.

HOLD UP ART BOARD

All this will be of interest to Councilman William A. Magee, who has said that he does not object to a Democrat on the conference board. What he would say to a whole board of Democrats is problematical.

It was at Magee's suggestion yesterday that the Mayor's Art Commission appointments were again held up by assigning them to the committee on Parks and Libraries to study their individual qualifications and draw a proper resolution.

The appointment of Donnell D. Reed as city assessor to succeed William H. Robertson, Republican, recommended by the Mayor, was turned over to the Finance Committee to be put in the form of a resolution.

Visitors Released In Numbers Raid

Eleven visitors in an alleged numbers pick-up station, arrested during a raid in the McGeagh Building, Webster avenue, January 27, were discharged for lack of evidence by Magistrate Howard B. McNutt in Central Police Court today.

Magistrate McNutt reserved decision in the case of Julius Cohen of 632 Wooster street, arrested in the same raid charged with operating a lottery. There is some dispute as to whether Cohen should be held on a charge of operating a lottery or keeping a gambling house. The city law department will be asked for a ruling.

Poor Association Shelters Children

There were 158 wandering youngsters housed in the Home for Transients maintained by the Pittsburgh Association for Improvement of the Poor at 1315 Liverpool street last month, according to a report today. Welfare and relief activities, with 1,675 families receiving aid, continued at a high peak.

RAY HARRISON

BANK PROMOTES RAY HARRISON

Richard K. Mellon, the new president of the Mellon National Bank, announced today that Ray Harrison, assistant cashier, has been promoted by the board of directors to the vice presidency.

Mr. Harrison joined the Mellon National Bank as assistant cashier in 1929, coming to this city from Chicago, where he was representative of the National Bank of Commerce. Prior to that time he had been with that bank in its New York office, following his resignation from the United States Army in August, 1922.

He is the son of the late Col. G. F. E. Harrison. He was born at Ft. Adams and is a graduate of the United States Military Academy. He served with the A. E. F. from October, 1917, to July, 1919, as captain of field artillery with the 1st and 26th Divisions. He is a brother of G. L. Harrison, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York.

M'ARDLE URGES CITY AUDIT

An audit of all city bureaus by certified public accountants looms if Council approves an ordinance introduced yesterday by Councilman P. J. McArdle. A complete check-up of the city's finances has been sought by representatives of the League of Women Voters.

An appropriation of $20,000 would be set up for the audit. The ordinance recites that employes of the City Controller are not numerous enough to do the work. Controller James P. Kerr is expected to appear in Finance Committee today to discuss the idea with Council.

M. C. Conick, auditor for Main & Company, has been working without charge recently in analyzing the city budget.

Six Men Arrested On Liquor Charges

Six men were held for court and six others fined on charges of violating the state liquor laws at hearings before Alderman Raymond E. Schneider today.

Those held are Albert Vargo, 839 Suismon street; Harry Daher, 117 Hawthorne avenue, Greentree; Frank Skirpan, 114 Pine street, Carnegie; Joseph Contaldo, 810 Sawmill way; Louis Carletti and Patsy Darensano, both of 5030 Orinoco street.

UTILITY FIRM AIDING M'NAIR METER FIGHT

The Manufacturers' Light and Heat Company today offered Mayor McNair assistance in devising new means of raising revenue to supplant the $2 utility meter tax passed by Council yesterday and fated to be vetoed by McNair.

Meanwhile, McNair promised to rally the support of the Democratic party to force the four Democratic councilmen to sustain his veto of the measure. The ordinance carries a possible $900,000 additional revenue for Pittsburgh this year.

In a letter to McNair, Vice President Charles E. Mitchell of the Manufacturers' firm, said his company is willing to stand its share of added taxes unless they are concentrated on public utilities.

STATISTICS OFFERED

The company, however, according to Mitchell, is not in a position to contribute in accordance with the "desires of Council."

The letter gives figures:

"For the year ended December 31, 1933, total gross revenues from gas sales amounted to $8,133,582, total operating expenses amounted to $6,652,425, leaving a net operating revenue of $1,481,157 to provide for amortization and return on the book value of the property used and useful in rendering service to the public of $57,937,611, equivalent to 2.6 per cent.

Meanwhile, McNair said the Democratic City Committee should be called together this week and the Democratic councilmen told to support his veto, if he chooses to use it.

The ordinance reaches the Mayor's desk today. He has 10 days to decide what he will do with it.

OPPOSED BY TWO

Council passed it yesterday without comment, William A. Magee and Robert Garland being the only opponents. John J. Kane, who sponsored the bill, fought for a $5 levy.

Sad indeed is the plight of the Democratic party, according to McNair, if it descends to the depths of taxing personal property. He said:

"The party might as well shut up shop if we start taxing personal property. The Republicans in the heyday of their power never dared do anything like that."

"I don't know what I am going to do. I am going to ask John Murray (Democratic city chairman) to call a meeting of the Democratic city committee this week. I will present my arguments and let Kane give his. If I veto the ordinance, the party should instruct the Democratic councilmen not to pass it over my veto. I thought when I illustrated with the linotype tax what this thing is, the people would realize. It's just making the people bear a tax which should be paid by the Schenleys and other large estates."

The Mayor had threatened to send an ordinance providing a $100 tax on linotype machines to Council yesterday.

Two Marriage Rites Fail to Hold Man

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Even two marriages in a week failed to hold them together, Mrs. Dorothy Mitchell—Dorothy Darling in the movies—alleged a bill for divorce filed in Superior Court. The 20-year-old actress said she was married to H. Paul Mitchell March 10, 1931 at Tia Juana, Mex., and four days later repeated the ceremony in Utah. She charged that Mitchell deserted her in November, 1932.

That sounds almost TOO GOOD to be true, even in these fairy-tale Alice-in-Wonderland days.

MURDERS HERE are so much more numerous than "autumnal leaves that strow the brooks in Vallombrosa" that they are not worth mentioning unless there is something queer about them.

The murder of the Rev. Gaylord V. Saunders, killed with a bullet in the back of the head, just after he had preached his farewell sermon, was a little queer. His widow says she paid a gentleman ten dollars to shoot her husband "because his mind was failing."

The young man to whom the wife gave the ten dollars to hire somebody to do the killing said he thought he would do it himself, and did, according to the story, quite as a matter of course.

A number of others knew about the shooting, but did not think it worth mentioning. They are indicted.

Sing Sing Prison announces scientific progress. An invisible light beam, not visible to the eye, maintained eight feet from prison walls, sounds a warning whenever anybody coming within eight feet of the wall penetrates the beam.

The same beam arrangement may be used, if you choose, to warn you, blowing a siren at night if any burglar comes close to your door or window.

Sing Sing also has an electric arrangement that shows whether visitors are carrying knives, revolvers, or other weapons for inmates.

Loaded Bus Goes Over Embankment

ROMNEY, W. Va., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—An eastbound Greyhound bus, carrying 19 passengers, went over a five-foot embankment three miles east of here early this morning when the steering gear locked while the driver was trying to take a curve.

The driver said he sensed the danger and warned his fares to set themselves for the shock.

Man Held in Theft Of Fur Coats, Purses

William Kerr, 27, Negro, of 1029 Blackadore street, was held for court by Magistrate Charles McCall in Center Avenue Police Court after he admitted to the theft of several fur coats and three pocketbooks from the home of Frank Smith, of 828 Shawnee street, former big league baseball player.

SLOT MACHINE OWNER HELD

Ben D. Lazar admitted in Center Avenue Police Court today that he owned the 80 slot machines seized in his store at 1340 Forbes street but he explained that three years ago a solicitous policeman had told him the machines were legal.

Lazar's counsel added that you got something for your money from the machines; your fortune was told.

Nevertheless Lazar and an employe, Bernard Sokolsky, 22, of Milwaukee street, were held for court. A bookkeeper, Caroline Evans, 21, was freed.

Foreign Consuls Call On Mayor McNair

A delegation of 14 foreign consuls representing all the consulates in Pittsburgh paid Mayor McNair a good will visit at his office today. The Mayor told them about his free port proposal, but declined an invitation to luncheon because he was to attend an Ad Club luncheon where Councilman Robert Garland was the speaker.

One Year to Live, Given 360-Day Jail Term

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—One year to live and a sentence to spend the next 360 days in jail.

That was the prospect faced today by William McCourt, 33, of New York, who pleaded guilty in Police Court here to three charges of false pretense, but asked for leniency on the ground that doctors have given him only a year to live.

Joseph Reiley, 37, also of New York, was given a similar 360-day sentence by Judge John P. McMahon after hearing charges that the pair had ordered groceries from a local store and tendered a worthless check.

NEW TAX PLAN FOR CITIES

A plan which will effect assessments and the collection of taxes in cities of the third class in Pennsylvania was approved at a meeting of the improvement and procedure committee of cities of the third class in Pennsylvania in the McKeesport Council Chamber last night.

The plan was proposed by Harry A. Holmes, chairman of the committee and chief city assessor of Erie. Mayor J. Fred Thomas, of Sharon, proposed that Mayor George H. Lysle, of McKeesport, and Director of Finance C. J. LaClair, of Uniontown, should present the plan to the law committee at Harrisburg. Others at the meeting, representing the 43 cities of the third class in the state, were John H. Lowe, city assessor of Farrell; John Bowman, Pottsville director of parks; H. E. Carter, city assessor of Titusville; W. S. Hurst, Johnstown director of finance, and Harry M. Jones, city solicitor of McKeesport.

Advertising Firm Under New Name

Smith, Schreiner & Smith, Inc., advertising agency, 323 Fourth avenue, announced today the change of its name to Smith, Hoffman & Smith, Inc. No change of executives is involved.

Charles F. Hoffman continues as vice president and the agency remains under the direction of its founder, Lambert Smith. Smith also is secretary-treasurer of the First Inter-Agency Group, an association of advertising agencies.

RUBBISH FIRM ACCUSED

Charges that the American Reduction Company is violating its contract with the city in the removal of rubbish have been made by the Independent Rubbish Men's Association and a hearing asked before City Council Wednesday.

The letter, signed by A. A. Maidhof, promised to bring out facts at the meeting. Under the city's contract, the company is bound to remove no commercial rubbish. An exemption is provided where a small store is combined with a dwelling.

The report of Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, budget advisor to Mayor McNair, estimated an annual saving to the city of $50,000 if two auditors and a checkweighman are added to the payroll to watch the garbage and rubbish weights for which the city pays.

A hearing for the rubbish men will probably be set in health and sanitation committee of Council today.

An ordinance creating the position of superintendent of the Bureau of Sanitation has been introduced in Council. This job, according to Health Director Ray P. Moyer, is to be filled by a specialist on garbage and rubbish incinerating plants. Council has been seeking information on building incinerators.

Two Men Fined $25 For Untaxed Liquor

Two men were fined $25 or 10 days in jail today by Magistrate Howard B. McNutt in Central Police Court for violation of the liquor laws. They are Kelso Bookhemmer, of 2 First avenue, and Raymond Fisher, of 4 First avenue.

LIGHTING DEAL UP TO P. S. C.

The Public Service Commission today considered arguments it heard yesterday on the proposed sale of lighting equipment of the borough of Coraopolis to the Duquesne Light Company.

H. C. A. Hofacker, borough solicitor, said that $75,000 the company proposes to pay the borough represents the cost of two motors valued at $25,000. He said the sale would avert a law suit that might result from the borough lighting its own streets.

Hofacker said the borough would lose more than $3,000 a year if it illuminated its streets on the 1931 basis.

John M. Walker, representing 12 citizens opposing the sale, said the $50,000 difference between the propose purchase price and the value of the motors is nothing more than a rebate by the company.

PACKET SINKING STIRS OWNER

NEW MARTINSVILLE, W. Va., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Capt. Harry Donnally, one of the owners of the packet boat Senator Cordill, which went down in the Ohio River with the loss of three lives, charges that negligence on the part of river officials is responsible for the sinking.

Skillful maneuvering by Pilot Wilsie Moore led to the rescue of 35 Cincinnati-to-Pittsburgh passengers as the boat sank after ramming a submerged wicket at Dam No. 14.

Asserting inland waterways regulations require dam officials to notify lockmasters at adjacent dams of any obstructions to navigation to keep pilots posted, Capt. Donnally declared no notice had been given that some of Dam No. 14's wickets had not been lowered.

He said the Senator Cordill, proceeding upstream at six miles an hour against heavy ice floes, sank after one of the wickets rammed a hole in its hull.

ONLY ONE KOHINOOR DIAMOND

GIMBELS TELLS THE truth

In all the world there is usually just one perfect, flawless thing of its kind. One Oriental rug that is the most beautifully designed; one make of motor car that's the epitome of all modern engineering; one gown of certain style that comes from the most famous dressmaker's own shop. And those perfect, "best" things are not for most of us. That's why neither Gimbels, nor anyone else, can truthfully say "this is the finest rug or silk or face powder you can buy." That's why Gimbels endeavors to tell you the whole truth, the limitations of the merchandise we sell, as well as the good points. We believe we always give as much and frequently give greater quality for the money you have to spend than any other merchant. We refuse, however, to tell you anything is the "best" that can be bought. You can depend on Gimbels to tell

SUITS & O'COATS

Two gentlemen didn't actually come to blows over a 22.50 Overcoat right on our Fifth Floor. No need of it! We've an unending selection for we mean to keep plenty of 22.50 clothing in our Men's Department. Many of the suit fabrics are Greenwich worsteds. That doesn't mean they won't wear out. It does mean it'll wear longer than most 22.50 clothing. The other fabrics are not so renowned, but they're worth every bit of their price. You can be sure of that. All this goes for the Overcoats, too. We ask you to see them tomorrow.

The sewing Instructor included with this pattern will show you how. Use novelty cottons, crepe or sheer wool.

LEGAL 'FORM' PERILS WILL

When a will is duly made, signed and witnessed, never mutilate the signature. That was what Deputy Register of Wills W. F. Barger urged yesterday when he admitted the will of Domenico Sesti, of Millvale, to probate.

Berger hesitated about accepting the will for probate when he discovered that Sesti's name had been cut out of the original document and pasted on one of legal form, which some justices of the peace use. He decided to take testimony, before accepting it.

It was testified by Earline Sesti, a son of the deceased, that following his father's death he had taken the will to Justice of the Peace Richard McCarthy, who suggested making it more legal by using a legal form and attaching the signature to the document prepared by the squire.

NO FREE WATER AT DUQUESNE

Duquesne residents who have not paid their water bills will receive no water from the city, it was decided at last night's meeting of Council. Six delinquent residents appeared before the meeting in an appeal for water and were refused.

Mayor James S. Crawford, backed by Council, told them that only in case of illness would water be supplied to a home where a back water bill was owed. He added that more money had been received by the city for water in the past three weeks than in any three-month period in Duquesne's history. The city began shutting off the water supply to those in arrears January 17.

PRIZE RECIPES HARD TO SELECT

Hundreds Submitted To Prudence Penny Every Day

If you think you have daily selection problems, just think of the dilemma Prudence Penny and the Sun-Telegraph recipe contest judges are in every day when from several hundred letters received they must select eleven to be awarded prizes.

Often there are duplications of one recipe, and a very fine one it may be, which automatically excludes all those like it from competition. Then, too, though the sender does not realize it, there are many cases where the address is omitted or again the name is left off. Occasionally a recipe is received where the sender fails to include an important and necessary ingredient in the list of what to use.

If you have sent in recipes and failed to receive a prize, keep on trying, for one of the unconscious errors mentioned above and not the recipe, itself, may have been at fault. Send in all your favorite recipes to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. One $5 prize, ten $1 prizes are awarded daily. No recipes will be returned.

One-half bay leaves.

Render the pork slightly in a heavy kettle, add chopped onions, turnips, tomatoes, potatoes, parsley and water. Season with a pinch thyme, salt and pepper. Simmer for 45 minutes, add the chopped clams and simmer for 20 minutes longer. Canned clams may be used.

MRS. ALBERT DAFTWYLER,

CHICKEN POT PIE

Three cups pastry flour.
One-fourth cup butter.
Two eggs.
One-third cup sour milk.
One-fourth teaspoon soda.

Blend butter and flour. Beat together eggs, milk and soda and add to flour and butter. Roll thin on floured board as for noodles (dough will be softer than for noodles). Cut into strips three-fourths inches wide and three or four inches long.

Have chicken stewed tender and seasoned with enough broth to cover meat when ready to drop in the strips one after the other. Keep moving with fork to keep strips separated in broth. Boil for about five minutes or until pie is tender. An Irish potato diced into broth adds to the flavor. We have used veal and also squirrel in place of chicken.

MRS. HENRY J. SCHAFERS,
210 East Park way.
SAUSAGES AND VEAL BUNNIES WITH MACARONI AND CAPER SAUCE

Ten strips of bacon.
Ten sausage links.
One package macaroni.
Two cups bread crumbs.
Two tablespoons of onion finely chopped.
One tablespoon of green pepper, chopped.
Milk.
One teaspoon of salt.

Mix bread crumbs, onion, egg, salt together, and enough milk to make a paste. Cover tops of veal and bind sides with bacon. Fasten each with a toothpick. Brown in margarine or butter, and half cover with water and cover pan. Let simmer for one hour. Remove meat from skillet, add more water and a paste of flour and water to make a thick gravy. This gravy is to be poured over the cooked macaroni just before serving.

CAPER SAUCE

One-third cup margarine.
Three tablespoons flour.
One-half teaspoon salt, cayenne.
One and one-half cups broth or beef bouillon.
One-half cup capers.

Melt shortening, add flour mixed with seasonings, cook smooth, add liquid, stirring constantly. When done add capers, which have been drained. Decorate with fried sausages.

MRS. NORMAN GRACE,
458 August street, Duquesne Heights.
FRIED OYSTERS

One pint oysters. Drain liquid off and add egg yolk to it, salt and pepper. Beat egg, milk and liquid together and set aside. Take one and a half pounds cracker dust and pour into bowl, salt and pepper and add one teaspoon baking powder. Mix well. Cup your hand to cradle fashion, fill with mixed cracker dust, place two oysters with one heart over the other in reverse position to have the thick part on each end. Pad tightly and redip in liquid and egg, repeat, shape them up and drop in hot fat and fry. Do not use wire basket, but turn oysters over with wire spoon to be sure they are done through. You will find they will not break up or mush if you pad them tight, and they will be a golden brown.

FIND OUT WHAT VITAMIN A does for Colds and Coughs

And you'll understand why it has been added to Smith Bros. Cough Syrup

Just since last winter a great medical discovery has been made!

This discovery aids you in driving coughs and colds out of your system FASTER.

And it actually raises your resistance against re-infection—those treacherous "one-cold-after-another" affairs.

Too good to be true? No sir! For now the way has been found to use Nature's own weapon to fight colds and coughs. That weapon is Primary VITAMIN A the "Anti-Infective" vitamin.

Now—when you take Smith Brothers Cough Syrup—you first of all get quick cough relief. Smith Brothers soothes the throat . . . loosens phlegm . . . clears the air passages.

Then its Primary Vitamin A acts on the mucous membranes of nose, throat and bronchial tubes. It raises their resistance. Promotes their normal, healthy function. . .

And you—you who used to suffer for days on end—you can SNAP out of the infection. Very different indeed from covering up or "doping" the cough or cold! Nature herself lifts you back to "million-dollar" health.

Those untidy habits come from jangled nerves

But it's twice as bad when you think that those nervous habits are a sign of jangled nerves . . . a friendly signal that says, "Find out what's the matter."

So, if you catch yourself mussing your hair, biting your nails, chewing pencils—or suffering from any other of those countless little nervous habits—

Get enough sleep and fresh air—find time for recreation. Make Camels your cigarette. You can smoke as many Camels as you please, for Camel's costlier tobaccos never jangle your nerves.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS than any other popular brand of cigarettes!

TEST No. 16

Place a cork upside down on top of a bottle . . . Back up six paces . . . Extend your right arm and sight with your index finger . . . Walk rapidly toward the bottle, without wavering your arm. . . See if you can knock off the cork with the first flip. Most people try this test six times before they succeed.

FRIENDSHIP FAN PATTERN 460

Popular Friendship Quilt

An old-time pattern, the Friendship Fan is as popular today as a friendship quilt as it was in the early days of quiltmaking. It has all the qualities of the ideal quilt of this type. The parts of the fan are just the right size for scraps. A gathering of friends can quickly do a quantity of blocks, for they are easily pieced. Each block, of course, could be made in the same scraps, as illustrated.

Pattern 460 comes to you with complete, simple instructions for cutting, sewing and finishing, together with yardage chart, diagram of quilt to help arrange the blocks for single and double bed size, and a diagram of block which serves as a guide for placing the patches and suggests contrasting materials.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Things I Never Knew 'Til Now

(Is there no end to the man's ignorance?)

That Charles A. Dana once wrote that the ideal newspaperman was one who "has studied Latin and Greek, who knows the Ajax of Sophocles, and who has read Tacitus, and can scan every ode of Horace." (I leave the flippancies to the better wits—such as F. P. A.)

That Swift, one of the titans of English literature, died insane, and his will provided for the founding of an asylum for lunatics.

That Beethoven, when he had completed one of his compositions, tested it on an old harpsichord, lest a more perfect instrument might flatter it—or hide its defects.

That salt can kill you. If you take too much of it, of course. It is a favorite form of suicide in China.

That syzygy is a dance step. (May I have this syzygy with you?)

That pink roses may be dyed a beautiful shade of green by dipping in ammonia. Also sweet peas, or any red or pink posey. (Whoops!)

That two-timing among her attendants was punished by Catherine the Great, who had five boy friends. (She forgot her own lease on a glass house—but name me a person who hasn't!)

That the term "ham," an insult to an actor, is worn as a badge of honor by radio amateur operators, for it denotes they have stations. There are 40,000 outside of those on B'way.

That if you can't carry a tune and you warble off key—you're probably a musician of the future. (For ¼ tone music is coming).

That the first blessed event in America took place 927 years ago. It was either in Nova Scotia or Maine and the parents were Thorfenn Karlsenfin and the widow of Lief Ericson's brother. The baby, named Snorro, was taken back to Scandinavia and grew up to be a big shot.

That Brooklyn Bridge is a Columbus, O., attorney.

That to multiply 105,263,157,894,736,842 by 2—simply take the last 2 and put it in front.

That you shouldn't score your kids for poor marks at school. G. B. Shaw was a dunce, too. A Shaw article asserts Joan of Arc had no sex appeal. The fact is, according to an authority on Joan, too much sex appeal forced her to discard her dresses for male apparel.

That July 24 is a bigger skyrocket day in Utah than July 4. (That was the day, in 1849, when the Mormons first entered Salt Lake Valley.)

That Washington, D. C., was first known as Conococheague.

That they say to insure a long life you should be born in Washington, D. C., move to Detroit at 22 and then to Los Angeles at 52.

That the first serial story to run in an American newspaper was "Religious Courtship," which ran in the Pennsylvania Gazette in 1729. It was written by D. DeFoe, who also turned out a piece that got around—about a desert island and a guy named R. Crusoe.

That in the U. S. the word "lottery" is taboo—yet in 1822 tickets of the Washington Monument Lottery were held by the best people, as they were amusingly called. In fact, the prizes for it were drawn on Feb. 22, especially to further the honor and glory of G. Washington.

That all the cuckoo clocks are made in Germany.

That we used to dislike doing this column — until Alexander Woollcott and some other outstanding opinion-moulders in the United States—told us it was the most fascinating trivia. (It is the easiest column to prepare—because we merely copy it from books and readers.)

That a leading male cinema star, now on Broadway, pulls in his ears by using adhesive tape. (I don't mean Gable, either.)

That when you see a movie in which actors are starving during a snowstorm—have a chuckle. (The snow is usually a cereal.)

That Ben ("Early to bed, early to rise, etc.") Franklin was a late sleeper until he was 78. (He awoke at 6 a. m. once by mistake.)

That if a ferry from N. Y. to Jersey hadn't been late, there would have been no Hollywood. One day in 1908, while waiting for the river boat, the late David Horsley paused at a book shop and started reading a tome on the new flickering snapshots. Soon he was a producer in Jersey—and in the winter of 1912 sent Al Christie and a company to California to make moving pictures in the sunshine. (Has Hollywood a monument for him? No!)

And that the honeymoon is over when he takes the local home.

Studio in Fog Caused by Esperanto

By LLOYD PANTAGES

For the first time in the history of fan letters MARLENE DIETRICH has just received one in ESPERANTO. This be the little language that was supposed to become the international tongue, and is sort of a mixture of Spanish, English and what have you. Needless to add, MISS D. and the combined forces of the research department are STILL in a FOG as to the contents of the epistle . . . but WHAT can you do?

WELL, I thought I'd seen EVERYTHING, but here's a new one: MIKE LEVEE (an agent) had a dog christening in honor of WARREN WILLIAMS' four wire-haired terrier puppies. Among them what attended avec pooches were: CORINNE GRIFFITH (dachshund), EDWARD EVERETT HORTON (collie), LOUISE FAZENDA (sealyham group), DICK POWELL (assorted dog), LESLIE HOWARD (English sheep), JOAN BLONDELL (pekinese), KAY FRANCIS (pomeranian), and GENEVIEVE TOBIN (spitz).

After testing practically all the gentlemen crooners for the prospective lead opposite JOAN CRAWFORD in "Sadie McKee," M-G-M decided just to use a STRAIGHT ACTOR in the role and have his songs "dubbed in" by others. REASON BEING that it seems the crooners can CROON all right, but when it comes to the HEAVY EMOTING they should stick to the ETHER.

IF the FASCISTI have their way ELISSA LANDI will go to ITALY to play the lead in "JULIUS CAESAR." Just whether she's to be done up in a sheet and play JULIUS himself is yet to be discovered. METHINKING NO.

* * *

LOUISE FAZENDA, since the advent of talking pictures, has never used her natural voice on the screen. That amusing vocal delivery is affected.—RED GRANGE and his professional football team (the Chicago Bears) will make a "short" for M-G-M.—JEANETTE MACDONALD is about to sign a new contract at the same studio.—SOMEBODY forgot to sign that contract between RKO and KING VIDOR, so now he's NOT going to direct a picture over there.—And MIRIAM HOPKINS has "clicked" so with her personal appearances in the Paramount that she's going on the ROAD before returning to THE MOVIES.

TODAY'S BIG BROADCAST FROM THE LAND OF FRUITS AND NUTS—GEORGE O'BRIEN is THAT conceited about his physique. He has a duplicate set of clothes made for each picture, ONE very tight (and I mean shirts, trousers, underwear and whatnot) for the CLOSE UPS, and the other LOOSER and more comfortable for the LONG-SHOTS where our Georgie has to jump on and off of HORSIES!

* * *

MR. ROSENBLATT (the NRA's GIFT to the movies) decided that Hollywood parties were not much in the way of southern hospitality. It would seem that he went out of an evening just to RESTICATE and RELAX his mind, BUT the Hollywood hosts and hostesses did nothing so much as to invite MR. ROSENBLATT out for BUSINESS REASONS, thereby wearing the gent to a FRASSO before he returned LOADED(?) with information for OUR PRESIDENT.

I wish to ANNOUNCE that GEORGE RAFT has now become a BOY SCOUT on a'count of TWO GENTLEMEN the other evening were JUST about to BEAT EACH OTHER UP in front of the Brown Derby BUT Georgie stepped up and, like LUCKY PIERRE, got in the middle and said, "BOYS, give up this FISTICUFFING. I gave it up years ago because it was getting me no place!" and MR. RIPLEY, do YOU KNOW that THOSE BOYS stopped immediately?

* * *

I want YOU ALL to know that CAB CALLOWAY (that sepia-colored maestro who waves his baton and body at the orchestra) will be off to Europe soon, and upon his return will be HOLLYWOOD-bounding to make a feature flicker for one of our companies (as yet unannounced). What with the MILLS BROS. such a tremendous success it won't be LONG now until HARLEM will move intact to the GOLD COAST. ALL TOO devoone!

Notes About New Programs Coming to Theaters

John Barrymore plays a lawyer who gets in a legal jam himself in "Counsellor at Law," screen feature in the Enright tomorrow. Doris Kenyon is Barrymore's wife.

Kay Francis and Ricardo Cortez in "Manadaly" will be seen on the Stanley screen Friday. Miss Francis plays the part of hostess in an Iriental dive.

Francis Lederer and Elissa Landi have featured roles in "Man of Two Worlds," opening Friday in the Warner. The story is about an Eskimo who falls in love with a picture of an English girl, whom he meets later.

Three Stars In Fulton

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

With Lionel Barrymore and Henritta Crosman doing a swell job of portraying a brother and sister carrying the tradition of a before-the-war South into the present day, instead of facing facts as they are, "Carolina" provides interesting wholesome entertainment in the Fulton. Janet Gaynor, as a planter girl, around whom all the action centers, and Robert Young carry the romantic angle to an altar conclusion, despite the efforts of Miss Crosman, as Young's mother, to sidetrack love's young dream.

The picture, based on the Paul Green play, "The House of Connelly," shows how an old family, that has degenerated from its once proud position, with echoes of a noble past echoing through the shaby remains of a once fine mansion, is re-established by energey infused by the daughter of a farm tenant who has died.

While Miss Gaynor is her usual wistfully adorable self, and gives a nice characterization, Mr. Barrymore really dominates the picture as an ex-Confederate soldier who still carries the flag for the lost cause. He is slightly nutty, but remains an imposing character, even when he threatens to withdraw his patronage from a merchant who will no longer trust him, but avoids telling him so.

Miss Crosman, the real head of the "house," is equally impressive as a determined woman, scornful of new things, and too proud to look with favor on the idea of her son loving a poor girl. Stepin Fetchit, Negro comedian, does good comedy work as perhaps the slowest mortal alive.

Local Dancer In Bill

"Folly Dollies," this week's offering in the Variety, includes an appearance of Wilma Horner, Pittsburgh girl, and Joan Collette, oriental dancers. Estella Montilla, Spanish dancer from the "Spanish City" at the World's Fair, Chicago, also is featured. She is a singer, too. Eddie Kaplin, comedian, is back after a two weeks' absence. He and Bimbo Davis dominate the comedy episodes. The Carroll Sisters appear in specialty numbers. Eleanor Johnson, dancer of the Gilda Grey style, also is prominent.

Gershwin to Be Heard In Concert

George Gershwin, composer-pianist; James Melton, tenor, and Leo Reisman's orchestra will be heard in a concert tonight in Syria Mosque. Gershwin compositions by the orchestra, with Mr. Gershwin at the piano, will include Concerto in F, "Rhapsody in Blue," "An American in Paris," and his new "I Got Rhythm Variations." Melton will sing six songs, including "Home on the Range" and "Hills of Home." Two pianologues will present Gershwin in seven selections.

AMUSEMENTS.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

In Which the Customers Do the Work.

"DO YOU remember, Mark," writes Ben Trask, "some of the old days in the Village? I do. It seems barely yesterday that I was sitting next to some dizzy dame in Eddie Winston's Red Head, waiting for Rudolph to slam a bottle of ginger ale down on the table.

"How long ago was that, Mark? Must be twelve or thirteen years now, I guess. Remember the cop on the beat who would never take any dough, but insisted on playing the drums every night for an hour? Remember what a madhouse the joint was around one in the morning when nobody thought much about anything, and cared less?

"Al would generally stagger in about that hour and offer a drink or two from a bottle of Joe's white death. That Al was never sober, Mark, even after he married one of the kids he had met in the Village. For a year after that marriage, Al was stewed to the ears.

"I don't suppose you know what happened to Al after that because you drifted uptown about that time. But a miracle took place. His wife handed him the big Stork news one morning—and Al was a changed man from that minute on.

"Sweet guy that he really was, Al quit barging around pronto. He tossed out all the full gin bottles he had saved, and went to work for his pop.

"Al's pop was pretty heavy with dough. And when the old man kicked in, he left most of the sugar to Al. He must have felt that his boy had straightened out, and he was quite right. Al more than doubled his father's money. He had a brain in his head and he used it.

"When he was in the money, one of Al's most likeable traits was his generosity to various charities. He gave freely, and really got a big kick out of helping people.

"One charity in particular that was Al's pet was a food station here in the city. He kept the station filled to the brim with food baskets for the needy. Many thousands of stomachs, sadly in need of food, had Al to thank for remedying the situation.

"Yes, Mark, the more money Al made—and Heaven knows he made plenty—the more good that man did with it. Maybe he tried to do a little too much, or something like that, because he awakened one morning to find himself completely broke.

"What did it? Your guess is as good as mine. The stock market, I suppose, or a combination of the market and too much generosity. At any rate, it happened—and things were pretty bad at that time.

"It certainly must have broken Al's heart to realize that he had to take his wife and kid to a cheap, little two-room flat in the Bronx. I guess he just couldn't realize what is was all about.

"And I guess his wife couldn't realize it, either—because she took the kid and blew. Just where she went Al was never able to find out. And I know that he searched plenty with nothing but hard luck. . . .

"A few weeks ago I met Al again. I gave him a five-spot, and he promised me faithfully that he would come up to my home for dinner that night. But he never showed up because he died that same night. It seems there was a gas leak in the room he had just rented.

"And that, Mark, is all there is to Al's story. Except that, in our last meeting, he told me he had gone to his favorite food station for a basket of food—and they had refused it to him." . . .

"IN A recent column," writes Frank Vornis, of Rochester, "I was amused to find you moaning about your plight as a columnist. It seems as though you and the other boys are finding it very difficult to attend opening nights, cabarets, parties and the like. I certainly feel sorry for you!

"To make you feel a little easier, I'm unfolding a little story that your article brought to mind. It has to do with the time that a prominent man of millions passed away in the city of New York. If I'm not mistaken, it was one of the Vanderbilts.

"The funeral was a huge and impressive affair. The dead man had been the owner of one of America's greatest fortunes, and his family would now inherit tremendous sums of money. Curiosity-seekers came from all over New York to gaze at the various members of the family as they attended the obituary services.

"After the services, the mourners left the church in orderly fashion to proceed to the cemetery. As the vehicles rolled away, a poorly dressed man stepped out on the avenue and began to cry and wail as though his heart would break.

"'Oh,' he howled. 'It is all so terrible. Oh, it is horrible. Oh, oh, oh!'

"His grief finally became so violent that it took two policemen to steady him. One cop was very sympathetic.

"'Why all the crying?' he asked. 'Are you one of the Vanderbilt relatives?'

"The violent mourner shook his head.

Satiric Skit Made Hit 'One Day'

By GEORGE SEIBEL

That there is abundance of good dramatic inspiration floating around in the Pittsburgh atmosphere was shown last night at the Experimental Theater, in the old school and meeting house on Aiken avenue, where E. Reeves Cochran's satiric portrait, "One Day," was presented by a cast of 20 to an audience that filled all the pews and stood in the vestry.

Mr. Seibel

The skit or sketch purports to be the portrait of a successful business man in four poses of a busy day.

First he is seen at the breakfast table with his wife, on the twentieth anniversary of their wedding. He gives his daughter good moral counsels, as she seems to be on the wrong road with a saxophone player.

Next he is seen at his office, where he receives a bonus of $2,000, squeezes two hard-up Hebrews out of a lot worth many more thousands, and makes a date for the afternoon with his festive stenographer.

Then he calls at the stenographer's home, gets the girl's mother out of the way, and acts in a manner highly unbecoming a reputable business man on his twentieth wedding anniversary. Last he is again at home, extinguishes the saxophone marauder, buys two fur coats for the members of his family and goes virtuously to bed.

The interesting idea about this portrait is that Mr. Darling, played by Mannye Breakstone, is accompanied everywhere by his five Senses, in O'Neill-Pirandello masquerade. These five Senses have been well drilled by Suzanne Karpova in pantomimic dances to serve as commentaries on the action of the play.

Besides his Senses, he is accompanied by his Conscience, played by Bruce Rodeniser, who has to avert his face most of the time and gets some hard knocks from the Senses.

It is a capital idea, carried out with considerable skill and not too much discretion.

The big hit of the performance was made by Burton Mustin as a street car conductor and uncle, who takes off his shoes with consummate comedy. Ray E. Hurd also did a good character bit as a wash-wringer baron. Howard Eulenstein played the saxophone player all but the saxophone. Mary Alice Yaste was an enticing stenog, and Kay Jacqueline Walker a meddlesome neighbor. The entire cast was adequately adjusted and directed by James W. Macfarlane.

"One Day" is a very promising little experiment in satiric fantasy, and will be repeated tonight and tomorrow.

Ray Hurd also read a new juvenile comedy entitled "Knight Life," as a hair and curtain raiser.

CUT THIS OUT

EXCELLENT RECIPE FOR CATARRH, CATARRHAL DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. Scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear, which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease may be driven down the air passages toward the lungs, which is equally as dangerous. The following formula, which is used extensively, is a constitutional treatment and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers.

Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (Double strength). Take this home and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmint used in this way acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a tonic action that helps to obtain the desired results. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh or head noises, or is hard of hearing should give this treatment a trial.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Extry! Extry! Extraw! Harry Brown has booked an attraction for the Nixon next week, hence the folks will not have to wait until the latter part of the month for another play. The one coming next week is a melodrama, "Ten-Minute Alibi," and it will be the sixth and final offering in the subscription series of the American Theater Society. "Ten-Minute Alibi" is an importation from London that opened in New York early in October. It is based on a murder that mystifies the sleuths but not the audience, this one being so different that the audience is let in on the mystery in advance of the actual commission of the crime. Crosby Gaige and Lee Shubert are the producers.

'THE WAR AT HOME:' PITTSBURGH'S HASTY PREPARATIONS

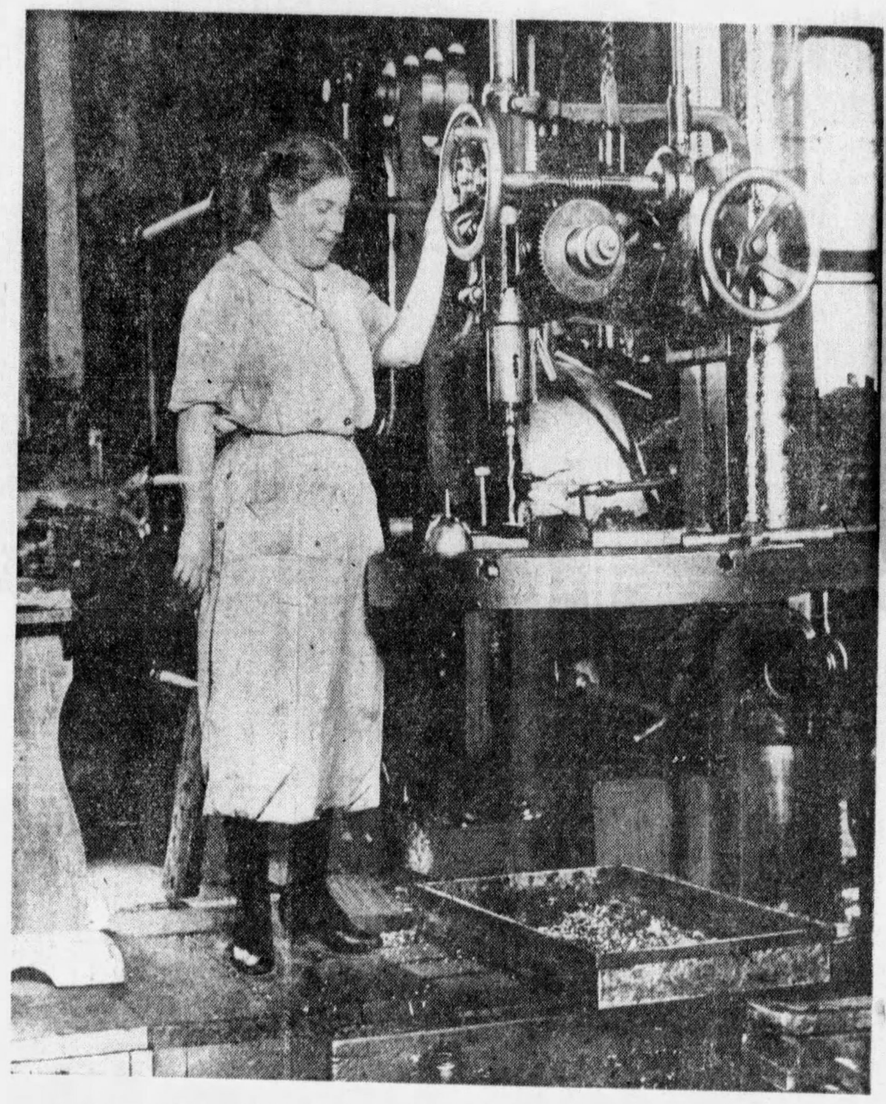
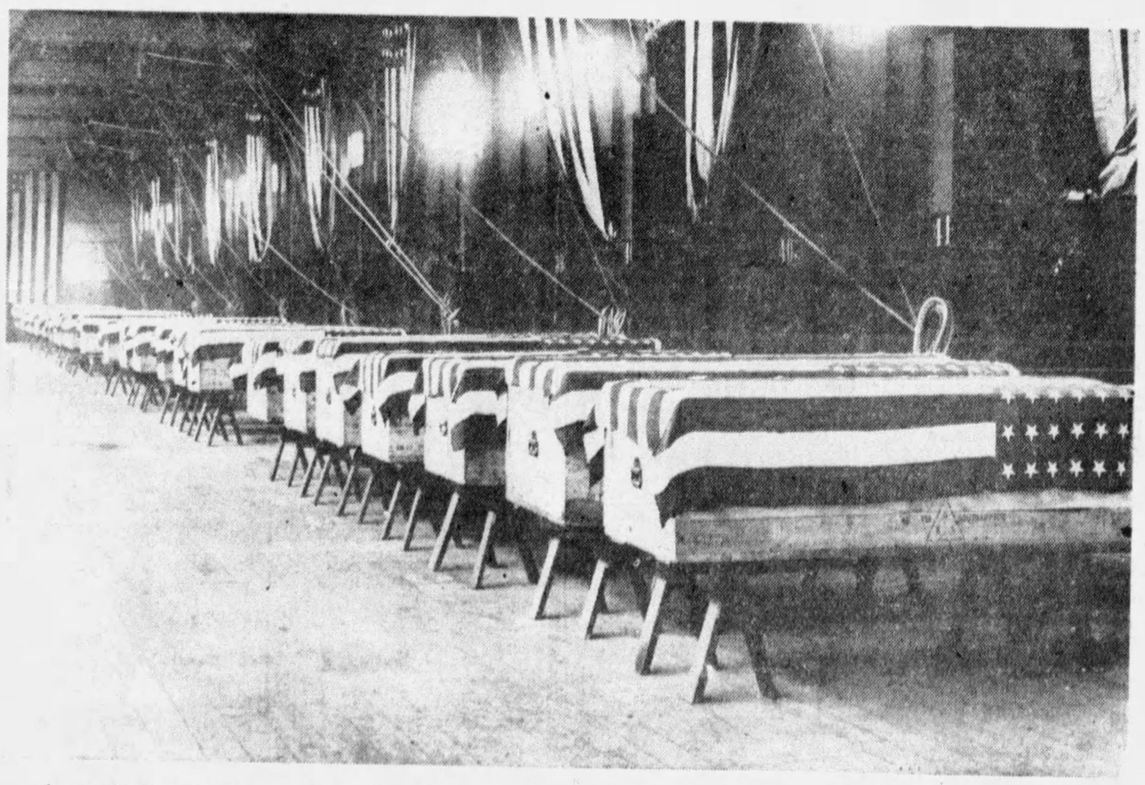
When war came to the campus: youths, many of them scarcely bearded yet, drilling alongside State Hall on the University of Pittsburgh campus. Their "turn" came next after the unprepared United States, waging war in a foreign land, had drawn older men of the city and county by draft and enlistments.



A woman and a machine; a typical scene, this one at the Homewood trolley car house, as women "did their part," took the jobs vacated by soldiers leaving the vital industries.

Soldiers—French and Yankees—virtually asleep on their feet near Rheims. Death came not yet to them, but exhaustion daily took a great toll of their physical and mental resources. This picture is from the Rodnick war collection.



A colorful homecoming—patriotically-colored, that is—at Hoboken Pier as the dead of the A. E. F. came back to relatives. It was for them to pay the highest price war asks. This is an International News Photograph Service picture.

Outstanding Moments of Pittsburgh's Own World War Story Told in the Pictures of Those Misty Days

Warfare, in the pages of Homer or Virgil, seems entirely noble and heroic.

But warfare, in actual human experience, is the most tragic of all occurrences.

If you doubt these facts, behold the pictures presented on this page—pictures showing our own American boys dedicating themselves to the Republic's life.

This enormous tragedy must not occur again.

But it will occur—tragedies far worse will be our national problem—if we decide to be a NATION UNPREPARED FOR WAR.

On the contrary, in this world of hates, if we show ourselves prepared for any enemy—and prepared enough TO WIN—we shall have no foreign wars.

And the money that preparedness may cost will be a ludicrous drop in the bucket as compared to the ruinous and liberty-losing cost of UNPREPAREDNESS.

'GYPPING' HIT AT BRADDOCK

Councilman George H. House, of Braddock, is of the opinion that the borough's employes "gyp" the borough "coming and going."

Just before a quiet session of Braddock Council closed last night House was given the floor and said:

"It isn't so bad for the borough employes to use the borough's trucks to haul coal to their homes, but when they use the same trucks to haul the ashes away it is time for us to put our foot down."

House did not name anyone in connection with the statement.

About 300 persons attending the meeting with expectation of seeing a battle between the Michael J. Verosky and Edward McDonough factions were disappointed.

JUVENILE HOME SITE URGED

The Civic Club of the Lincoln Avenue District urges that a survey be made of the Home of the Good Shepherd property in Lincoln avenue with the view of the county purchasing the property and using it as a juvenile home, it was announced today by George D. Sheriff, secretary of the club.

At a recent meeting of the club a protest was raised against the County Commissioners erecting a juvenile home in Oakland. The Home of the Good Shepherd can be purchased for $125,000, according to Sheriff. The club points out that the Lincoln avenue property includes 10 acres of land and a fireproof building especially adapted to the needs of children.

LINDBERG BACK AS CHIEF

In the absence of Burgess Richard H. Lawry, council reinstated Lindberg at last night's meeting. The score is now even, as Lawry has fired Lindberg twice since entering office on the first of the year and council has twice reinstated him.

Lindberg was held for court several weeks ago on charges of impersonating an officer, robbery and felonious assault, at a hearing before Lawry. The charges were preferred by Patrolman William O'Brien, who claimed that Lindberg took his badge and pushed him.

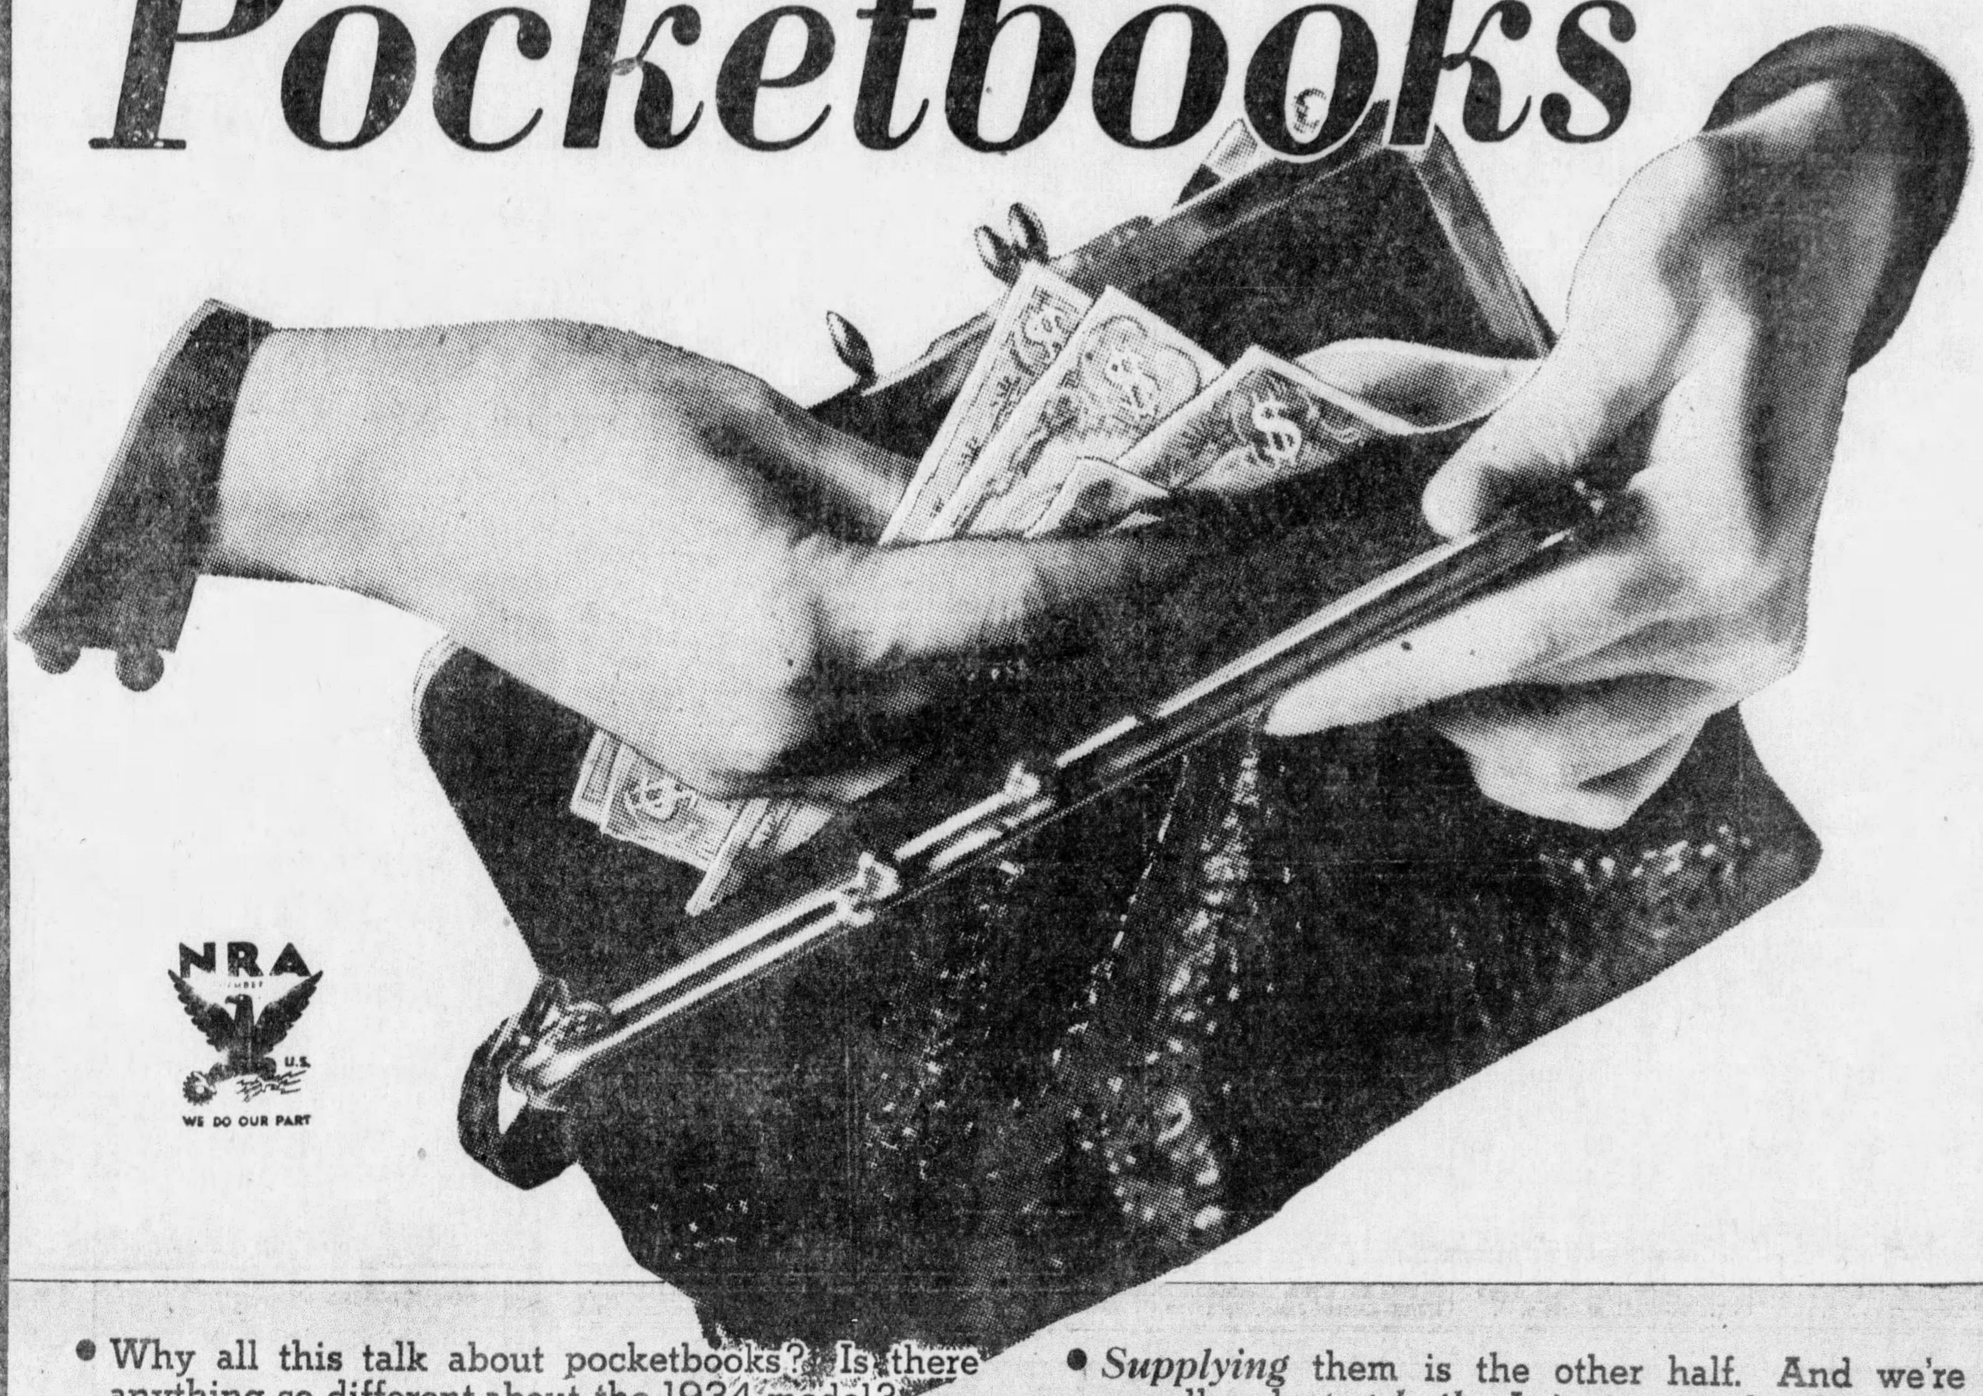
Priced for 1934 Pocketbooks



NRA MEMBER U.S.
WE DO OUR PART

- Why all this talk about pocketbooks? Is there anything so different about the 1934 model?
- Not much in appearance, perhaps . . . but you'll have to admit it's a trifle smarter . . . a bit more reluctant to give up . . . harder to fool . . . and downright insistent on getting its money's worth.
- If we know anything at all about Pittsburgh's buying habits, we know this . . . that thousands of Pittsburgh men and women have a better understanding of values today than ever before.
- Why? Simply because the depression taught us the difference in values . . . that a bargain is your money's worth, whenever, and wherever you buy.
- A big store is quick to sense these reactions. Daily contact with thousands gives us an opportunity to study not only your wants . . . but also your needs . . . and to anticipate your requirements, even before you know you want them.
- Our buyers are ever alert to this responsibility. Discerning your needs is only half the job . . .
- Supplying them is the other half. And we're equally adept at both. Is it any wonder then, that for our Department Buyers' Sale, our entire organization has stepped into double-time . . . every man has girded himself for the big job of the year . . . and set about to provide VALUES in his own department that will give 1934 pocketbooks a new lease on life.
- We've taken a month-long selling event, and concentrated all of its savings, all of its values, into THREE GREAT DAYS. When you come Thursday, you'll see a picture of merchandise values that will make your pocketbook nerve tingle at the new prospect of economy.
- Everything you want . . . everything you need is here . . . Apparel for yourself and family . . . Furnishings for the home . . . Fresh, new stocks of staple goods . . . bought-right . . . styled-right . . . value-right and quality-right . . . and

AMERICA'S Smoothest CIGARETTE

GLOBE TROTTING

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Being a numismatic has its thrills. Never would I believe that there was a one-mill coin, a tenth of a cent, but there is. I have one. It was sent by Charles Marketch, G. T. N. adviser. It was coined as a souvenir of the Chicago World's Fair, dated 1933.

A letter from Chuck usually means a bawling out as well as valuable information. He takes me to task for admitting that I polished up an old coin. Evidently this is very bad practice among old coin collectors as well as a sign of uttermost ignorance. So don't you do it.

Those 1913 liberty head nickels mentioned here lately are very scarce. Authorities claim there are only about five or six in the world and none in circulation.

If you by chance should come across one, don't be foolish enough to donate it to the numismatics. The temptation might be too great.

The letters from Globe Trotters who have been urged through the radio to look at the uncensored world war pictures have been very gratifying. Mrs. C. Matison, of Crafton, found them excitingly interesting.

Thomas A. Morrisey was especially impressed with the one in the daily series titled "Cannon Fodder."

Mr. Morrisey was with the British troops during the war and remembered when he first saw Yankees landed in France.

They were a 10-week trained group of boys from America. Mr. Morrisey at the time was a veteran of years campaigning and his observation was "Cannon Fodder."

He has boys of his own now and cites the need of adequate preparedness so that no more will America experience the scenes of the last war.

PECK'S BAD BOY IN FILMS AGAIN

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—"Peck's Bad Boy," oldtime favorite book by George W. Peck, is returning to the screen.

Sol Lesser, producer, has announced that Jackie Cooper, boy star, had been borrowed from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to play the title role in this production.

The story was filmed 10 years ago with Jackie Coogan, now a Santa Clara University student. The present talkie production Lesser said, will have the same director, Eddie Cline, and the same cameraman, Frank B. Good, as the Coogan silent version.

POLITICS

G. O. P. Marks Time For Democrats.

By MARK SHIELDS

Republican regular leaders will do nothing regarding the candidacies of various gentlemen who would like to run for Governor until after the Democrats have held their state committee meeting in Harrisburg Saturday.

Mr. Shields

So far as the regulars are concerned, at least so far as those wedded to the state organization beyond any desire for divorce, even on statutory political grounds, are concerned, the senatorial contest is settled with Senator David A. Reed the regular entry. But the gubernatorial scramble continues chaotic.

If the Democrats should give evidence in Harrisburg of falling into factional strife which might carry through the general election as well as the primary, the Republican leaders may feel they can take a chance with some old guardsman (no reflection upon Gen. E. C. Shannon, commander of the National Guard), not finding it imperative to choose a liberal who could combat a unified Democratic party running on a Rooseveltian platform.

What the Republicans must realize, however, is that their success does not depend upon warfare in the Democratic party so much as it does holding the loosely attached thousands in their own party who are independent in general elections.

This week there will be some local conferences among Republicans here, in Philadelphia and the central part of the state. These are to be followed by a big parley in the East at which a final choice of the organization controllers will be announced.

Dunn Faces Hard Fight For Seat in Congress

The Thirty-fourth Congressional District in Allegheny County, now represented by Congressman Matthew A. Dunn, is to be the scene of some hard fighting in the primary election, not confined to one party.

Dunn, of course, will be a candidate, and so will Guy Campbell, whom Dunn defeated in 1932. A third entry will be K. William Schuchman, who led the fight on the County Poor Board, and was himself a candidate for poor director after he had charged irregularities to the board.

Schuchman, like Dunn and Campbell, will run in both primaries, as will nearly every candidate who enters the field next spring. Republicans will try to safeguard themselves by getting two nominations, and Democrats will endeavor to protect their own primary so that there will be no repetition of the rain check nominations secured by some Republicans last year, Republicans who since turned Democrat.

As a candidate Schuchman will appeal to the independent vote, as will Dunn, and that vote is no small factor in the Thirty-fourth District.

In the Washington-Greene County district organization Republicans are discussing a slate which is designed to save one place which now is in extreme doubt. So far the proposition is but tentative, but it is being entertained and sped on its way by some men high in party affairs.

The scheme would have John L. Stewart, Washington publisher, become a candidate for Congress with organization support. Senator Chauncey W. Parkinson, who has been struggling in the political quicksands, would again seek his Senate seat, and D. Glenn Moore, former member of the Legislature, and associate editor of one of Mr. Stewart's newspapers, would again run for the House.

That would bring about a combination of independence and organization. In the past as well as in the present, Mr. Stewart has expressed himself freely on what he thought were the faults of the leadership in his party, only a few days ago printing an editorial to the effect that the party should be reorganized on sounder and more enlightened principles.

Independent-Regular Combine May Not Click

Mr. Stewart has no patience with compromises of expediency which are blind to fundamental faults.

This disposition may prevent the fruition of the dream of the organization leaders attempting to promote the line-up before noted.

It would be a good vote-getting net, Mr. Stewart and Mr. Moore, the latter a former Pinchot floor leader in the House, would be a bid for the independents.

Mr. Parkinson, a loyal organization follower to a point which has jeopardized his political future, could stand for some such assistance of this nature.

Out of Westmoreland County from a Democratic group opposed to Judge Charles D. Copeland as a candidate for Governor comes the charge that the Judge in the 1930 primary functioned principally as manager of the primary campaign of Francis Shunk Brown and James J. Davis, candidates for Governor and Senator, respectively, on the Republican ticket.

These Westmoreland County Democrats insist that the Judge is more of a Republican than a Democrat, and therefore is entitled to no assistance from Democrats in the coming primary should he seek nomination.

With Judge Copeland thus attacked, and George H. Earle III, the candidate slated by Joseph F. Guffey and David L. Lawrence, enrolled as a Republican, it begins to look as though the Democrats might have to import a candidate from Georgia or Florida if they want to get one dyed in the wool.

CLUBWOMEN PRAISE FAIRNESS OF SALES TAX

CONSTITUTION CHANGE AIM IN TAX DRIVE

State Rally to Seek Modernization Of Government

A constitutional convention for the purpose of modernizing Pennsylvania's 60-year-old Constitution will be demanded next month at a state-wide meeting of representatives of taxpayers' organizations, to be held in Harrisburg. The convention, scheduled for March 21 and 22, will be the first step toward the creation of a single and powerful state-wide organization of taxpayers.

The demand for the constitutional convention will be but one point in a large program to be brought forward for discussion by the many representatives who are expected to attend from all parts of the state.

SEEK CONSOLIDATION

In addition to seeking revision of the Constitution, the representatives of many associations will ask that the next Legislature consolidate many of the 5,600 local governmental bodies to eliminate duplication and waste in governmental operation.

Other proposals to be discussed will be consolidation of school districts, replacing the present 2,535 districts in the state with 67, or one for each county.

The convention delegates are also expected to demand a central assessing body for each county, as well as a central receiver of taxes in each, replacing the present army of collectors drawing commissions.

TAX COMMISSION AIM

Another important piece of legislation to be proposed at the convention is the creation of a state tax commission, similar to the one now functioning in Indiana.

In Indiana, taxpayers who believe their local budget is excessive and who protest certain bond issues, can take their troubles to the state board, which reviews the budget and proposed bond issues. The commission has the power to deny local authorities the right of issung bonds and to cut down budget expenditures.

The abolition of all fee offices in the state and the substitution of salaried officials will also be proposed at the state meeting.

The state-wide convention is the result of much work on the part of many organizations affiliated with the Pennsylvania Tax Justice League.

PROGRAM APPROVED

Last week the executive committee of the Tax Justice League met in Altoona, and the program to be brought up at the state convention was outlined. I. Leonard Aronson, president of the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners and Taxpayers' League, presented the program, which was approved and is now ready for the state-wide meeting next month.

Many taxpayers' organizations not affiliated with the Tax Justice League are expected to send representatives to the state meeting, where efforts will be made to bring every member of every tax organization in the state into one strong and powerful group.

Other proposals to be discussed are:

No school tax on real estate. Education should be paid for by the state, with federal aid.

Abatement of all penalties, interest and costs on all delinquent taxes, upon execution of an agreement by the taxpayer with the collector to pay delinquent taxes in five annual installments, with reasonable terms for payment of current taxes.

Legislation to compel tax-levying bodies to determine millage rates on basis of one hundred per cent collection of taxes.

Taxation of real estate of public utilities and public service corporations at same rates as on other real property. Exemptions to be granted only to properties used strictly for religious and charitable institutions.

Owners of real estate only to vote on municipal, school, or county bond issues.

Limit taxation against real estate by enactment of laws fixing millage rate which would be exceeded only by vote of the real estate owners in the municipality affected.

Uniformity of personal registration for voting.

A more equitable distribution of the tax burden by deriving revenue from all persons having incomes and the ability to pay tax.

MANY AGENCIES HELPING VETS GET BONUS

Legion, V. F. W. and Red Cross Active; Rush Continues

Veteran posts and allied groups continued today to be swamped by veterans seeking to fill out application blanks for the state bonus. Downtown headquarters reported steady lines almost continuously.

The American Legion county committee has established temporary headquarters in the downtown office of the Sun-Telegraph at Fifth avenue and Market street. Experienced members aid veterans in filling out blanks daily from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m.

The American Red Cross is rendering the same service in the Welfare Building, Smithfield street and Oliver avenue; the Eightieth Division Veterans' Association in the Plaza Building, and Salvation Army, Third avenue. All legion posts offer assistance nightly at their post homes.

The office of Recorder of Deeds, in the new County Building, will be kept open until 10 o'clock tonight for the benefit of ex-soldiers unable to apply for the bonus during the day, Samuel D. Foster, Recorder, announced today. The late closing time will remain, Foster added, as long as deemed necessary.

ACTION SOUGHT AT NUMEROUS MEETINGS

Canadian Levy Seen Factor in Routing Depression

Mrs. Robert P. Marshall, president of the East Liberty Juniors, will present the manufacturers' sales tax plan to her club members at the next meeting, February 16. She said:

"I am in favor of the manufacturers' sales tax because it is a tax we might all share equally. The income tax or any other tax should be for all the people, not for a few. In my business career, I have made out enough income taxes to know."

FAIREST LEVY

Althought the next meeting of the Allegheny Valley Woman's Club is an anniversary, Mrs. A. D. Endsley will present the manufacturers' sales tax to her members at the earliest opportunity. She said:

"I favor it because it is the fairest way to all the people."

WORKS IN CANADA

The plan was to be discussed today in several club meetings. Miss Margaret Halligan, president of the Carrick Mothers' Club Auxiliary, was to present it with a resolution for adoption. She said:

"I consider the manufacturers' sales tax a very profitable tax. I discussed it recently with some friends of mine who had just returned from Canada. They were impressed, they said, by the fact that the depression has nearly disappeared in Canada.

"The Canadians have been able to do it without the elaborate recovery program necessary in the United States, due largely to the successful operation of the sales tax there during the last 13 years. I will certainly give the plan a place on the program of our meeting today."

ACTION IN WILKINSBURG

Mrs. J. S. Hooper, president of the Wilkinsburg Wednesday Afternoon Club, will present information for discussion and a resolution for adoption at the next meeting of her club February 14. If the plan is favorably received, a telegram will be sent to Congressmen, indorsing it, she said.

Mrs. Enoch Hill Turnoch, president of the Bryn Mawr Farms Woman's Club, plans to do likewise at her club meeting the same day. Mrs. Benjamin J. Barth, president of the Knoxville Library Club Juniors, was to give the plan a place on her program today.

The plan was to be considered by a board meeting of the South Hills College Club today, according to Mrs. T. C. Cheeseman, president.

TRUCK OWNERS TO TALK CODE

Code and traffic discussions will be heard by the Pittsburgh Chapter, Pennsylvania Motor Truck Association, at a meeting tonight at the garage building of Adolph Blattner, 3129 Forbes street.

Mayor William N. McNair will be a guest of the 1,000 members expected to attend. Benj. G. Eynon, former state motor vehicles commissioner, is expected to discuss code problems. Ralph De Palma, famous auto racer, Police Supt. Ben R. Marshall and State Highway Patrol Capt. W. C. Price also will speak. Edward McCrady, Jr., president, will preside.

Schoolgirls Defend Nuns From Police

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 6.—(INS.)—Four hundred young girls of a Catholic boarding school in the capital suburb of Micoao today defied federal agents and city police who attempted to take the building under a law passed recently by the government.

The girls, fearing the nuns would be arrested, formed a barricade and forcibly prevented the officers from entering the school. After several hours, the police abandoned the undertaking.

4 GIVEN TERMS IN TRUNK THEFT

Sidney Goodfriend, 36, of North Highland avenue; Walter R. Greene, 32, of R. D. No. 5, Wilkinsburg, and Elmer Vincent Martin, 34, of North avenue, Millvale, yesterday in Federal Court received sentences of one year and one day in the government penitentiary at Lewisburg. Paul D. Stewart, 27, was sentenced to three months in jail.

Goodfriend was convicted of receiving in Pittsburgh on August 30 merchandise stolen from an Interstate motor express freight shipment. The other three were indicted for theft of the merchandise. Stewart and Greene pleaded guilty and Martin pleaded no defense.

Greene and Martin were the truck drivers. After leaving Pittsburgh, the truck, in charge of Martin, alone, caught fire near Rochester, Beaver County, and some of the remaining cargo was destroyed. Martin asserted the fire was an accident. Goodfriend at his trial said he had purchased the merchandise in good faith, believing it part of a bankruptcy sale.

Took along the program of the first automobile show in Americ. It was in Madison Square Garden in 1900.

Most of the cars exhibited then were foreign make. But when Detroit got started you know what happened. We thought the Omaha boys would like to see that ancient program.

We got the program from Harry Stevens, who made millions selling hot dogs in the Garden. He retired after that famous Democratic National Convention. He worked so hard he got mustard poisoning. So did the conventon.

The cars out here are the same models they used at the New York show in January, with a slight improvement. They have a small brush attached for polishing the nails on hitch-hikers' thumbs.

Oil Chief Cites Harm In Duplicated Levies

Sales Tax Equitable Solution, Asserts Institute Head

Spokesman for a basic industry, Axtell J. Byles, of New York, president of the American Petroleum Institute, has given the Hearst newspapers the following statement on the advisability of having Congress enact federal sales taxation.

By AXTELL J. BYLES

President, American Petroleum Institute.

President Woodrow Wilson once said:

"In a country of great industries like this, it ought to be easy to distribute the burdens of taxation without making them anywhere bear too heavily or too exclusively upon any one set of persons or undertakings."

One of our current difficulties is excessive taxation. Regardless of whether excessive taxation is borne by an individual or by a group, by a small business organization or a large corporation, by one industry or several industries, the adverse effects are felt by all. We like to think that the other fellow is paying the taxes, but we forget that inescapably we are the other fellow's other fellow, and that we pay, too.

Another difficulty arises from duplicating taxes. The federal, state, county and local taxes upon motor fuels are examples. Recent figures indicate that the average retail price of gasoline for 50 representative cities in the United States is 14.3 cents per gallon, exclusive of the tax. The present combined average state and federal tax is 5.18 cents.

That means that the tax is 36.2 per cent of the retail price, including the tax. Putting the matter in another way, out of every dollar spent by the consumer for gasoline, 36.2 cents goes in the aggregate for taxes.

It is hardly necessary to add that a retail sales tax of 36.2 per cent on such an essential commodity as gasoline is an instance of taxation so excessive as to have few, if any, parallels in the whole history of taxation. Taking the wholesale price of gasoline on the average, the tax is in excess of 100 per cent. One of the results is reduced consumption, which adversely affects government revenues from this source.

A general manufacturers' sales tax, imposed and collected by the federal government exclusively, would not only carry out the Wilsonian theory of taxation but it would distribute the tax burden equitably. It would be easier for all industries and all consumers to pay a small tax. These facts hold true regardless of whether the tax is levied on the principle of ability to pay or the principle of direct benefit.

Many of those who today may be escaping the punitive taxes levied upon others forget that their turn may come tomorrow. It would be tax insurance for them, and sound policy, to submit willingly to a small tax generally and widely imposed and to pay it gladly, with the realization that they are contributing their share to the support of government and thus meeting their responsibility in this connection.

The board of directors of the American Petroleum Institute has been advocating for some years a federal manufacturers' sales tax, having learned by sad experience the unfortunate effects upon an industry of excessive, inequitable and punitive taxation.

In a resolution adopted May 17, 1933, it was suggested that a federal manufacturers' sales tax of general incidence be substituted for the present oppressive and discriminatory excise taxes on a few commodities. We know of no other way in which necessary revenue can be more equitably raised or with less hardship.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 6.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Well, all I know is what I see by the papers, and I see where the manufacturers' sale tax comes up in Congress this week. They been needing that for a long time, and I imagine it will pass, but it's not going to do what a lot of 'em want it too, replace the income tax.

Will Rogers

And there is no reason why it should, you are going to need sales tax, both federal and state, income tax and a lot of other kinds. It's a great country, but you can't live in it for nothing.

Yours, WILL.

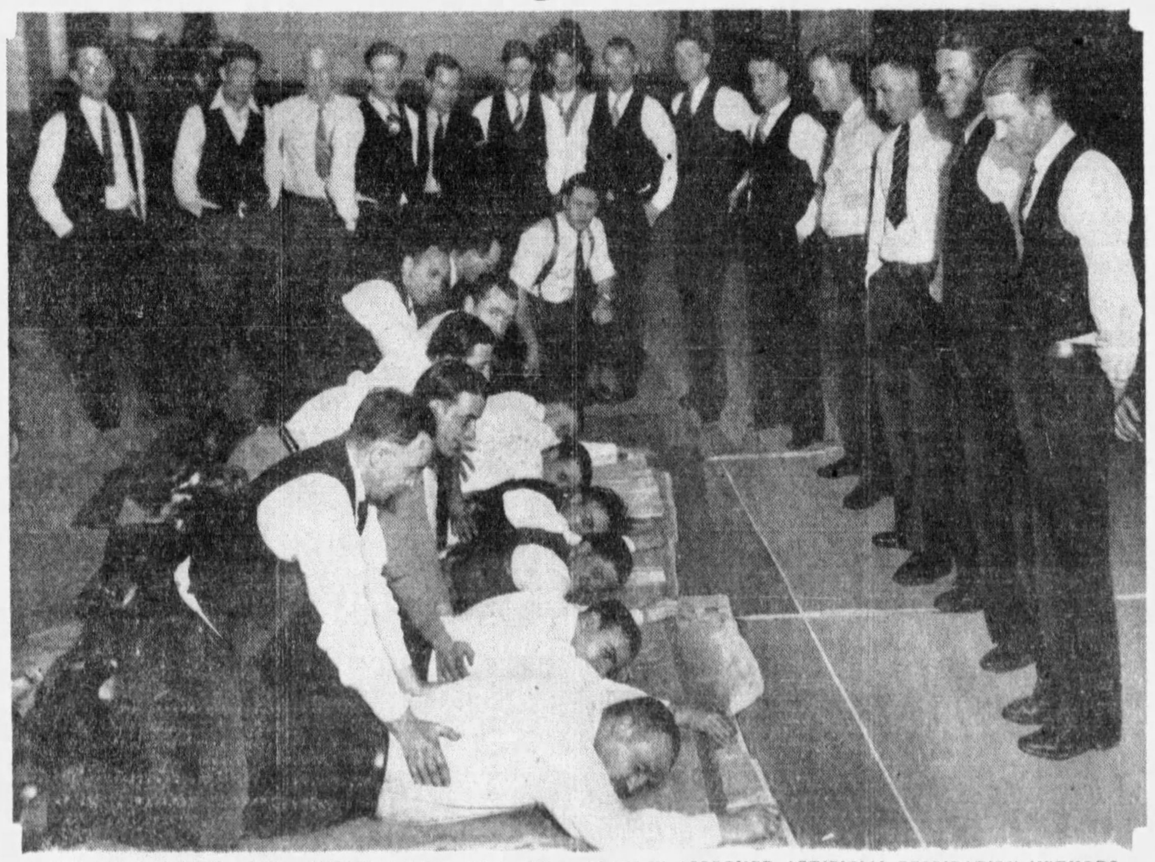
CWA Workers Learning About First Aid Methods



NATHAN KAUFMAN (FAR CENTER) DIRECTING A CWA CLASS IN APPROVED ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATION METHODS

CWA workmen at the Philadelphia Building learning first aid, taught to 250 selected CWA workers who henceforth with first aid kits will treat all accident cases on the jobs on which they're employed in this district. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

CWA Workers Learning How to Treat Injured

A first aid school for CWA workers is being conducted today in three downtown office buildings.

With 10 Red Cross instructors as the faculty, and Dr. Russel Jones, Bell Telephone Company physician, as dean, classes in emergency medical treatment will be held every afternoon this week. When the course is completed, students who pass the final examination will be awarded standard Red Cross first aid certificates.

Two hundred and fifty employes, chosen from CWA projects throughout the county, are registered in the school. After completing their training they will return to their jobs where, equipped with first aid kits, they will treat all accident cases.

DEFENSE BEST PEACE MEANS, SAYS BAKER

"One of the most powerful arguments for peace" lies in the Sun-Telegraph's pictorial expose of the horrors of war and its battlefields, Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, said today.

Declaring that ostensibly, if peace is to be maintained, we must also maintain an adequate national defense, Dr. Baker said:

"Every decent, sane person deplores war. These pictures make him deplore it all the more and at the same time point out the necessity of preparedness in the maintenance of peace.

S. M. Conway, commander of Corporal H. O. Diller Post, No. 169, Veterans of Foreign Wars, in a letter to the Sun-Telegraph:

"The World War photographs are timely and may well serve their purpose in awakening the American people to the need of adequate defensive measures. We firmly believe that an adequate national defense is our best, our only insurance against the possibility of future wars.

"We pray that this country may never again be forced to participate in another war; we pray that the younger generation of men may never be compelled to witness similar experiences."

Five more pages of photographs, taken during actual warfare on World War battlefields and collected by Floyd Gibbons, will appear in next Sunday's Sun-Telegraph. In addition, a full page of local wartime scenes is published daily.

The Best GRAY HAIR REMEDY IS MADE AT HOME

You can now make at home a better gray hair remedy than you can buy, by following this simple recipe. To half pint of water add one ounce bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and one-fourth ounce of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it yourself at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained.

Barbo imparts color to streaked, faded or gray hair, makes it soft and glossy and takes years off your looks. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. Do not be handicapped by gray hair now when it is so economical and easy to get rid of it in your own home.

Killed in Crash

J. H. GRIESEMER

HOSPITAL HEAD KILLED BY TRAIN

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Feb. 6.—Jesse H. Griesemer, superintendent of the Citizens' General Hospital and a bridegroom of six months, was killed by a Pennsylvania Railroad train which struck his automobile last night.

He was driving from his home, 558 Ridge avenue, when the northbound passenger train struck his car at the Seventh street grade crossing. The automobile was hurled 40 feet. A witness said Griesemer attempted to jump out.

Griesemer came to New Kensington as superintendent of the hospital four years ago from Quakertown, Pa., where he held a similar position. Previously he had served as assistant superintendent at the Allentown Hospital.

He leaves his wife, the former Ruth Milliren, of New Kensington; three daughters by a previous marriage, Mrs. Carl Schollenberger, Miss Clara Griesemer, of Allentown, and Miss June Griesemer, of Fords, N. J.; two brothers, Jacob and Sol, and a sister, Mrs. Clara Hardy.

INSULL HEALTH REPORT SECRET

ATHENS, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—A sealed report on the health of Samuel Insull, Sr., today was sent to the Ministry of Interior by two medical professors of the University of Athens, Vladimir Bensis and George Livieratos.

The report will remain secret until the arrival tomorrow of Gen. John Metaxas, minister of the interior. Prof. Bensis denied a rumor that it certified Insull was able to travel only if there is no danger of his displaying great emotion.

The 74-year-old fugitive from criminal charges in Chicago had been ordered to leave Greece by January 31, but an investigation of his health caused a postponement of enforcement of the order.

JOHN ELSRODE, 86 . . . . DEAN OF PITTSBURGH'S PRINTERS

ELSRODE DIES, PRINTERS' DEAN

A printer's career of 69 years, most of which was spent in composing rooms of Pittsburgh newspapers, had ended today for John (Jack) Elsrode, 86, veteran proofreader of the Sun-Telegraph. He died yesterday in his home, 2829 Wylie avenue.

Returning from the Civil War after three years' service with the 22nd Pennsylvania Cavalry, a youth of 17, he became a printer's apprentice. In the years that followed he was in the employ of the old Pittsburgh Dispatch, the Leader and, later, the Sun-Telegraph.

He had seen the old ways of typesetting and printing, largely by hand, give way to high-speed mechanical devices, including the linotype and the rotary press, development of photo-engraving and color printing.

As the dean of Pittsburgh newspaper printers he had a wide acquaintance among composig room staffs.

He never married. He was a member of Gen. Alexander Hays Post, No. 3, Grand Army of the Republic, and of the printers' union. He leaves a brother, W. O. Elsrode, of Harrisburg, and three nieces.

MAN DIVORCES VANISHED WIFE

Charles E. Miller, of 96 Forty-fourth street, has been granted a divorce from Clara W. Miller, after charging she disappeared in 1928, at the same time a male boarder in their home vanished.

The couple had 10 children, and the youngest, a son of 3, was taken by the mother when she left, Miller said, adding:

"I never heard anything from them since. I had her disappearance broadcast in August two years ago, when one of our children died."

Miller testified before Judge Harry H. Rowand that he had made every effort to find his wife. He said he married her in an elopement to Cumberland in 1900 when he was 17.

Big Saving! No Cooking! So Easy!

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It takes but a moment to prepare, and costs very little, but it positively has no equal for quick, lasting relief.

From any druggist, get 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with granulated sugar syrup, made with 2 cups of sugar and one cup of water, stirred a few moments until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's so easy! Thus you make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready-made, and you get four times as much for your money. It never spoils and children love its taste.

This simple mixture soothes and heals the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease. It loosens the germ-laden phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway Pine, the most reliable healing agent for severe coughs. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

Outlasts Tooth Paste 2 to 1

THERE is nothing known that will clean and polish teeth so quickly and leave them so gleamingly white—as POWDER.

That is why your dentist, when cleaning your teeth, as you know—always uses powder.

As it is only the powder part of any dentifrice that cleans, a dentifrice that is ALL POWDER just naturally cleans best.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder is ALL POWDER—100% cleansing properties. This is more than twice the cleansing properties of tooth pastes.

● Dull Teeth Become White

Dentists everywhere recommend Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, because—teeth simply cannot remain dull and film coated when it is used.

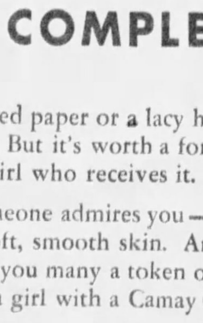
It cleans off all stains and tartar, and polishes the teeth in a harmless and practical way that leaves them sparkling—many shades whiter.

● No Grit—No Pumice

Free from all grit or pumice, Dr. Lyon's cannot possibly scratch, or injure the softest enamel, as years of constant use have shown.

Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder keeps your teeth REALLY CLEAN and clean teeth mean—firm, healthy gums, freedom from pyorrhea and the least possible tooth decay.

● Lasts Longer—Costs Less



Once you use Dr. Lyon's Tooth Powder, you will never be satisfied to use anything else. It leaves your teeth feeling so much cleaner, your mouth so refreshed, and your breath so sweet and pure.

Dr. Lyon's is not only doubly efficient, but it costs only half as much to use. Even a small package lasts twice as long as a tube of tooth paste.

Now! Ease Sore Throat Instantly!

1 Crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Aspirin Tablets in half a glass of water.
2 GARGLE thoroughly — throw your head way back, allowing a little to trickle down your throat.
3 Repeat gargle and do not rinse mouth, allow gargle to remain on membranes of the throat for prolonged effect.

Remember: Only Medicine Helps Sore Throat

Modern medical science now throws an entirely new light on sore throat. A way that eases the pain, rawness and irritation in as little as two or three minutes!

It requires medicine—like BAYER ASPIRIN- to do these things! That is why throat specialists throughout America are prescribing this BAYER gargle in place of old-time ways.

Be careful, however, that you get real BAYER Aspirin for this purpose. For they dissolve completely enough to gargle without leaving irritating particles.

Most of Pittsburgh's smart set is stay-at-home inclined—except in the summer. But, of course, the social registerites can boast of a group of enthusiastic travelers and lovers of colorful resorts.

For example, there are the George W. Crawfords, of Woodland road. They are now in Palm Springs, Cal., stopping at the Desert Inn. And they have their baby daughter with them. Mrs. Robert N. Warmack, Mrs. Crawford's mother, is also in the party.

Horseback riding, tennis, swimming, golf, moonlight picnics, scenic motor trips and sun-baths are the chief diversions of the gay colony of desert visitors at Palm Springs.

After the Stage and Play production tomorrow night in the Twentieth Century Club, the William S. Moorheads will plan for a West Indies cruise. They expect to leave late this month.

Mrs. Moorhead is a joint director of one of the three one-act plays Stage and Play will give tomorrow evening.

Zero Weather Encourages Reading, Club Women Told

Addressing the Twentieth Century Club yesterday morning, Earl Weeks, literary editor of the Atlantic Monthly, spoke of the encouraging effect of zero weather on reading. He emphasized the relationship between old books and new ones and spoke of "three literary gold mines from authors, dead and underground"—Samuel Pepy's diary, the Blenheim papers, which have been released under the title of "Marlborough, His Life and Time," and the Boswell papers.

Mr. Weeks spoke, too, and always most entertainingly, of Arthur Bryant's "Charles II and His England;" "Journey of the Flame," a romantic autobiography rising from a foundation of fact; Katherine Mayo's "Soldiers, What Next?", which has to do with veterans' demands and which was said by Mr. Weeks to be "filled with machine-gun bullets of solid facts." Comment was made on the "mellow, reflective prose, direct, lively narration and naive philosophy" of "Anthony Adverse."

Historical fiction is on a rising market, Mr. Weeks observed, as a preface to his discussion of Kenneth Roberts' "Rabble in Arms." Sinclair Lewis' "Work of Art," Pearl Buck's "Mother," "Flush," by Virginia Woolf; Mazo de la Roche's "Master of Jalna," Masefield's story of China, "Bird of Dawning," and "Men Against the Sea," by Charles Nordhoff and James Hall, were others included in the hour's delightful talk.

Women Should Take Care In Making Selections

A certain dress has won many a husband.

A scarf blowing to the wind has caught and held a roving eye.

If the Lily Maid of Astolat floating down the stream had been less fair of face and more fashionably garbed, she might have won her Lancelot from the queen.

Charles M. Bregg, one of the most able dramatic critics of his day, and who was on the old Gazette Times for years, spun reams of criticism to me upon the scanty garb of the prevailing choruses. And it always ended with:

"Those girls will lose all their charm for us men, if they aren't careful."

Florenz Ziegfeld, the greatest exponent of the American woman and her beauty, spent thousands of dollars on every one of his shows. And it was the frippery for the girls that cost the pretty penny.

The poet may sing of beauty unadorned. Septemb · Morn may cause a short furore. But it takes a Blue Boy to live over a hundred years and then strut across the United States at a quarter in silver for a look.

Wear a plain calico frock into a gathering where all the other girls are dolled in evening fripery, and where is the fellow who can take you from the wall flower line?

Have you ever watched the men in a cafe? Which of the girls do they observe as she trips down past the tables?

Every time it is the one who is dressed in the most glamorous fashion. The one with the most subtle combination of color. The one who looks as if she came direct from a fashionable shop's bandbox.

NEED NOT BE COSTLY

A dress cut to just the right length to show a girl's handsome back. A dress cut to the correct angle to indicate the best portion of the feminine figure. This is the dress that gets you in Class A of womanly "it."

Clothes need not be overly costly. But they must be well selected. Clothes may not be so gaudy that they strike the onlooker dead.

Clothes need not be tinseled like a Christmas tree, nor to be glittering as a peacock's tail. Yet, thank God, for clothes. They have bamboozled us into a Lethe-like condition that eradicates for us the cares and the tribulations which otherwise might be spelling destruction.

It was Billy Burke who confessed to buying a hat every time she has the blues.

On a home trip from Europe in 1929, I had several chic dresses in my trunk. But I also had a delicately shaded pink chiffon which I had purchased in America. The first night on the boat, I wore the chiffon. Unfortunately for my fashionable dreams and for the more fashionable gowns in my wardrobe, I was introduced to a fellow passenger who paced the deck with me under the still and star decked sky of the Atlantic.

"Wear that dress every evening," he requested. "It makes me think of my first sweetheart."

RELATIONSHIP OF COLOR

There I was. Flattery bound me all around by a woolen string. Me, longing for my Paris finery, and yet the women in me compelling the pale pink chiffon.

Chances are if the early sweetheart and I had been side by side there would not have been a vestige of resemblance to be found. The pale pink chiffon did the damage. The bewitching relationship of color and texture had outlived the face of a girl.

Allusion and love go hand in hand. The whimsical, the material which is just persistent enough and yet not too concrete, endures forever in romance.

That is why youth is so linked to Cupid. Youth is fleeting. Here today. Gone tomorrow. So may be love.

Orlando says:

"Then love me, Rosalind."

And Rosalind replies:

"Yes, faith I will, Fridays and Saturdays."

And all the while to hide the chasing she was doing of her man.

Who is your Rosalind?

Does she wear gauze stockings? Does she have one of those little jackets which doesn't look warm enough, and gives you such a chance for arm protection?

Who is your Orlando? Your Fridays and Saturdays are his with your lips. But your eyes give him the balance of the week.

'Do Not Confide Domestic Squabbles to Friends,' Says Fay King

DON'T DISCUSS YOUR LITTLE QUARRELS WITH ANYONE!
FORGIVE ME, DEAR, I'M SORRY!
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

Some couples who have been married for many years insist that they have never had one cross word.

What they mean is that they have forgotten that they ever disagreed over trifles. So quick they were to smooth things over and admit that they were sorry, they have actually forgotten they ever had the least argument. For the most congenial persons in the world do not always agree in everything.

It is a mistake to rush off to friends and confide some slight domestic squabble. This often brings too hasty advice that will exaggerate the importance of the matter in your mind.

No one likes to have one's faults discussed. Love, honor and be loyal to your mate in marriage, and you will be happy!

Madge Scores a Victory With Mary and Noel

I heard an incredulous little gasp from Mary as I said that if it were not for the people who would be so grieved by their elopement, I would ring the minister's door bell myself.

"Of course I understand," I said. "That awful girl has tortured you both until you are not responsible for what you are saying or doing."

"I know one thing I'm doing," Noel said with grim decision. "I'm not going to have Mary walk to her wedding altar with that beast trailing along in front of her. I don't care what my father does. I've reached the limit."

"But Avis Arlen is not going to be in the wedding procession," I said quietly.

"You mean she's not going to be a bridesmaid!" Mary cried, and Noel added. "But what will my father say, even if we went on with the ceremony?"

I countered his query with another.

"Will both of you promise to keep quiet until I get through talking?" I asked.

"Of course," they answered as one, and I drew a long breath. Could I, in Dicky's parlance, "put it over?" I was very skeptical of my own powers as I began to talk, slowly and in simple words.

To begin with, Noel," I said, "you succeeded tonight in doing something which I did not think could be done. You completely cowed and routed Avis Arlen. She is so humiliated and so frightened that she is almost in state of collapse. Her only thought is that knowledge of the scene tonight be kept from the knowledge of the people in the house, especially the youngsters."

HOLY BLACKMAIL

I paused, and Mary, forgetting her promise to keep silent, muttered:

"You can be shouting that neither Noel nor I will broadcast it."

"I know that," I said, "and the knowledge helped me to make a bargain with Avis. She is as anxious to keep out of the bridal party as you are to have her absent from it, and she understands that if she tells your father, Noel, the real reason of her absence, I shall tell everyone in the house what really happened in the study."

"Wow!" Dicky interjected, and I remembered that he had not yet been told of that interview in my study. "What a gifted blackmailer my frau turns out to be! But it's holy blackmail, little one, so take my blessing and go on with it."

"I intend to," I said imperturbably. "From this minute on, Avis will never be one foot away from either Mr. or Mrs. Underwood or myself. We'll have to excuse you from the party, Dicky, because you have to give the bride away.

"I would bar her from the house altogether, but her mother and your father, Noel, are coming down, and I want to get through the affair with no scandal or even excitement. I give you my word, however, that not only will she be absent from the wedding procession, but she shall not speak to either of you, or come anywhere near you. I shall make that stipulation part of my 'blackmail,' and she will be as rigidly kept away from you as if she had the smallpox. Under those circumstances, don't you think you could reconsider this step? For my sake, dear children? Really, it means more to me than you can guess."

WORRIED ABOUT FATHER

There was no affectation in my broken voice as I finished, and Mary lifted her head from my shoulder and then hugged me tightly as she exclaimed:

"Just so I don't have to see or talk to that ape, I'd rather go back. What do you say, Noel?"

"If there wasn't anything at stake except my own inclination," Noel said honestly, "I'd rather go on now. But I agree with you that it can't be done, so we'll go back. But will you tell me how she's going to explain things to my father? He's sure to suspect something, he's so shrewd."

"I don't believe he'll suspect this alibi, it's so natural, if he knows Avis," I said, and told them her plan to tell Philip Veritzen that she could not stand it to wear the bridesmaid's gown in the color planned for her, and so stayed out of the wedding procession.

"I hope she makes it emphatic enough." Noel said, as he helped Mary down, so that they might drive back in his car, "or he's likely to hold up the wedding for an investigation."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

'Growing Pains' Often a Warning of Trouble

No doubt you have heard a mother say that her child suffers from "growing pains." She ignores the complaint because she believes the symptom is a natural experience of childhood. This is unfortunate. Many children become victims of rheumatism, "osteomyelitis" and other similar afflictions because unwittingly they have been deprived of proper medical attention.

Dr. Copeland

I am glad to say that in recent years many mothers have come to realize there is really no such thing as growing pains. A child who complains of pain in the legs, arms or back, is no longer regarded as merely the victim of "growing pains," but is placed under proper medical oversight. It is probable that many children have been saved from chronic disorders and permanent defects by this fortunate change of opinion.

Of course, I do not mean to criticize the many mothers who have looked upon the so-called growing pains as a normal event of childhood. It is only within the past two decades that this disturbance of childhood has been properly understood, even by the medical profession. It was universally accepted as a sign of the rapid growth of the child.

Such symptoms as leg ache and back ache, were often attributed to the unusual activity of the child during the day. In fact, one authority claimed that growing pains were due to the rapid growth of the bones as compared with the slower development of muscles and skin.

From a careful survey made of many children suffering from "growing pains," it became evident that the symptom indicated a disturbance of a serious nature. Such children have disturbed sleep, they fatigue easily and are more susceptible to the routine diseases of childhood. It has been shown that children who complain of "growing pains," are likely to develop heart disease later on in life. In many instances, the child becomes the victim of acute "rheumatic fever" and almost invariably suffers from a complication known as "rheumatic heart disease."

I do not mean to imply that "growing pains," are always signs of rheumatic fever, but they do indicate trouble and infection somewhere in the body. The infection may be located in the teeth, tonsils or sinuses. Often it can be traced to tuberculosis of the bones or joints. Too often in these cases the trouble is erroneously diagnosed as "growing pains." In consequence, the disease is allowed to exist for a long time without the proper attention.

Bear in mind, that osteomyelitis, which is an inflammation of the bones, is a common affliction among children and young adults. It is one of the conditions often mistaken for "growing pains," and if neglected, may prove a serious and disabling disease.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When bathing, wipe the skin surface between the toes carefully. If the flesh looks unnaturally white and sheds thick scales, it is possible that the affliction known as athlete's foot is starting up. If the condition becomes worse, there will be abrasions, cracks that bleed. Medical attention is necessary.

Even though curls flutter from ladies' pates, the cap-like coiffure remains good style. It is the proper hairdress for the business girl whose ringlets are likely to be rumpled and untidy before the home-going hour arrives. The side part remains, all women love it. Undulations are wide and regular, sometimes taking a cross line at the back, ends sweeping behind the left ear. Soft fluffy bangs are modish; wonderfully becoming to the chic lassie who can get away with them.

Even the bleached blonde is no longer subject to criticism. It's taken for granted that women will dally with dyes and bleaches, and nothing can be done about it. The danger is in overbleaching. Peroxide itself does little harm to the hair, it is the ammonia added to make the lightening process speed up—that burns and destroys the shafts, makes hair so dry that soap suds roll from it as water rolls from feathers. Oil treatments are recommended when that condition is present.

Contract Bridge

:-: HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Driving Out Re-entries

It seems a very human impulse, when playing a hand at a no trump contract, to immediately seek the establishment of the longest suit and, of course, with an honor missing, the usual and approved method of such establishment is to take a finesse, provided the number of cards held in the combined hands is not so great that a drop of the cards is probable. However, there is one other consideration when seeking the establishment of the longest suit which every person playing the hand at notrump must take into account. That is the necessity of driving out certain re-entries when either opposing player has a long establishable suit. A failure to recognize this necessity quite often results in the defeat of the hand, which, as the cards lie, should be an absolute laydown.

Take as an example the hand below, which was played in one of the matches preceding the Grand National Tournament of the United States Bridge Association in New York.

North, Dealer.

	♠ 7 6 ♡ Q J 10 7 ◇ A Q J 4 2 ♣ A 9
♠ Q J 10 9 5 ♡ A 8 6 ◇ 9 3 ♣ Q 8 5	North West East South	♠ 8 3 2 ♡ 9 5 4 ◇ K 7 6 ♣ J 7 4 3
	♠ A K 4 ♡ K 3 2 ◇ 10 8 5 ♣ K 10 6 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇ (1)	Pass	2 N T (2)	Pass
3 N T (3)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Of course, North's correct bid.

2—With his 4-3-3-3 distribution and 3 honor-tricks, the correct response.

3—The alternative course for North would have been to rebid the diamonds or to show the four-card heart suit.

West opened the Queen of spades, and the correct play is, of course, to permit it to hold. South has a loser in any event in the spade suit, and it is better, generally speaking, to win the second and third rounds of a suit than the first and third, as often a valuable tempo is gained thereby.

The spade suit was continued, and South won the second lead with the Ace. Obviously, he had two spade tricks, two club tricks and five diamond tricks available if the diamond finesse was successful. However, there is a much more important consideration and that is the need of driving out the Ace of hearts before the spade suit is established. Thus played, the location of the diamond King is a matter of minor importance. Therefore South's correct play is to lay down a heart to the third lead, and now it is immaterial whether West takes the first, second or third round of hearts. The only card of entry in his hand for his long spade suit will have been removed before the spades are established. Later in the play the diamond finesse can be taken with safety, and while it is true that the finesse loses, by this line of play South makes not only his contract of three notrump but an overtrick—immaterial, it is true, in rubber play, but invaluable in Duplicate.

Of course, the players who took the diamond finesse before driving out the heart Ace failed even to make their contract, as East, winning the diamond with the King, returned the spade, and South had to content himself with two clubs, four diamonds and two spades as he was unable to establish a winning heart.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Cocktail Service

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am one of the many homemakers who find your column helpful and just now I need advice on fruit cocktail service.

Should a cocktail, served as an appetizer and containing dried fruit, be eaten with a spoon in order to get the liquid? If so, what kind of spoon? Or is it only permissible to use the cocktail fork for such an appetizer?

My family especially likes this kind of appetizer and, although I do not care to be formal, I would like to know the correct way of serving it to guests.

A DEVOTED READER.

For a fruit cocktail of any kind we should place the teaspoon, either the regular teaspoon or the smaller one, known as the "five o'clock teaspoon." It is not such good form to place the oyster fork, for the simple reason that this silverpiece is not so convenient. The juice of the fruit cocktail is too delicious not to be eaten! The oyster fork, the cocktail fork, is correct to use when we eat oyster cocktails, crabmeat cocktails, lobster cocktails, and such kinds of cocktails, but the teaspoon is the thing for fruit cocktails.

Wedding Supper

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married very soon and I would like to know, since I am having a very quiet wedding, if it is necessary to have a wedding dinner for his parents and my parents? Would it be an extremely bad breach of etiquet if that weren't done and if we get married quietly and just have a buffet luncheon?

C.

Indeed this would be the proper thing to do. The buffet service is the customary kind of service after a wedding, even a very formal wedding, and you needn't feel a bit hesitant about doing this.

THE REGAL SPRING COIFFURE

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IF YOU HAVE EARS, prepare to show them off this spring! There is quite a hot movement afoot among hair stylists who claim that they need a bit of ear to have their creations set off in a human manner, and strange to relate, handled softly, it is a becoming notion.

ONE'S BROW STANDS for intelligence, so to speak, so it, too, is being bared to the eyes, and what with brushing the hair off the neck, off the brow, and off the ears, it develops that streamline effects have entered the coiffure scheme of things along with every other feminine department of good style.

THE REVULSION against mock jewels in the hair, tiara fashion, has set in. But is it the falseness of these glitterings that has put women off them? Hardly! For the coronet braids which replace them in building up a formal headdress, are false as a rubber doughnut, too.

PITT, DUQUESNE FIVES PRIMED FOR SECOND CLASH

Maxie Again Spills Dope.
Game Escapes Black Eye.
Robbery Stories Spiked.

More to Make 200 Hits.
Support for Bench Pilot.
Carr May Not Be Done.

That last night's fight between Maxie Rosenbloom and Joe Knight in Miami might end in a draw was the one possibility on which none of the dopesters had figured. A drawn battle when there is a world championship at stake is a rarity, and this match in particular had been sized up generally as one that would either shift the light-heavyweight title to Knight, in view of reported suspicious circumstances, or would see Rosenbloom slapping his way to a decisive victory through one of those displays of improved form he usually had given when his crown was on the line.

Maxie Rosenbloom

Even in getting only a draw with the Georgia challenger, the first time he has failed to get the verdict in a title bout, Maxie did enough to retain his championship and once again fool the critics who have been predicting his downfall in his every defense of the 175-pound diadem. Though he does all his training in cabarets and night clubs, and loses many decisions in non-titular bouts, the Gay Caballero braces sufficiently in every championship number to hang on to the title he has held since he took it from Jimmy Slattery in Buffalo on June 25, 1930. That he was given a draw by Southern judges in his opponent's Dixie territory last night indicates that Maxie didn't get any the worst of the fighting, to say the least.

The retention of the championship by Rosenbloom in this particular instance was a help to the boxing game, as in view of the queer stories that had been circulated, and the fact that the so-called wise money had been wagered on Knight to win, a decision to the Southerner would have been looked on as evidence of a business arrangement or a steal, with a resulting black eye for the game. The boys have set the stage for a return match in New York, anyhow, but in doing so they appear at least to have fought an honest fight.

YEAR TO SWELL LIST OF 200-HIT FEATS

With National League batters swinging at a livelier ball, the 1934 season is likely to make some additions to the list of players who have made 200 hits in a season. Since 1888, when rules similar to those of the present day were adopted, that feat has been accomplished by 96 men. Earlier achievements do not afford a fair basis of comparison, as the pitching distance was shorter, the ball was of poorer quality, and in 1887 a base on balls was scored as a hit.

In the last two years, 14 players made 200 or more hits in a campaign, but only Chuck Klein, Jimmy Foxx, Heinie Manush and Al Simmons reached the mark in both seasons. Ty Cobb made 200 hits in a year nine times; Willie Keeler did it in eight seasons; Rogers Hornsby, in seven; Jess Burkett, Sam Rice, Al Simmons and George Sisler, in six; Paul Waner, Napoleon Lajoie and Lou Gehrig, in five; Lloyd Waner, Joe Jackson, Chuck Klein, Heinie Manush, Bill Terry, Tris Speaker and Johnny Tobin in four, and Babe Ruth and Frankie Frisch, in three.

FUCHS COMPARES TWO TYPES OF PILOTS

Playing managers may be growing in favor elsewhere, but Boston has in Emil Fuchs one baseball magnate who sees greater value in a bench pilot. All of which is not to be wondered at, in view of the fact that Fuchs is extremely fortunate in having a manager like Bill McKechnie at the head of his club. There aren't many McKechnies running around. The president of the Braves thinks he is qualified to compare the types, as he has tried both since his entry in 1925. He had Dave Bancroft and Rogers Hornsby as playing skippers, Jack Slattery and McKechnie as bench directors, and even attempted to run the team himself from the dugout in 1929.

Emil Fuchs

Fuchs believes the double task of playing and managing is too tough for one individual. He thinks it hurt Bill Terry's batting last year and affected Joe Cronin in the world series. The Boston mogul recalls that often after tough games Bancroft was too tired to talk things over, and remarks that even a bench general is fagged after a strenuous contest and the playing manager naturally must be even more fatigued. Fuchs thinks the toughest thing a player-pilot has to fight is the fact that he makes an error himself now and then, so with all things considered the Brave owner says he is definitely in favor of the bench or third-base coaching manager, feeling that that type gets the maximum out of the material and the situation.

PICKS OLD TEAMS OF JOHNS AND BILLS

J. J. Griser, of 2841 California avenue, North Side, a baseball follower for more than 60 years, joins in the picking of "all" clubs and writes to submit a team of Johns and another of Bills, first names, picked from major league players of the past.

The John team is made up of Kling and O'Connor, catchers; Clarkson and Tener, pitchers; Ganzel, first base; Evers, second base; McGraw, third base; Wagner, shortstop; Corkhill, Ward and Titus, outfielders. The Bills are represented by Ewing and Killefer, catchers; Terry and Rhines, pitchers; Bransfield, first base; Gleason, second base; Clingman, third base; Dahlen, shortstop; Hamilton, Lange and Keeler, outfielders.

CARR MAY ATTEMPT COMEBACK ON TRACK

It sounds like a fantastic idea, but Philadelphians are speculating more or less seriously on the possibility of seeing Bill Carr on the running track again. That Carr would ever put on another pair of spiked shoes was not dreamed of when an automobile accident last March broke both of Bill's ankles and fractured his pelvis, but Quakertown track critics see nothing less than a proposed comeback in the fact that Lawson Robertson, Penn coach, sent a special invitation to Ben Eastman, Stanford's great runner, to come East for a feature 600-yard run at the Penn Relays, April 27-28. They feel sure Robertson had in mind a resumption of the famous Carr-Eastman speed duels.

Bill Carr

The belief is based on the fact that Carr has recovered sufficiently to play tennis regularly, and has been seen running on the Franklin Field boards. Asked if he intended to run in competition again, the Penn star was evasive, replying only that he had felt the lack of exercise and was out chiefly for his health. Carr was considered definitely done once before, after suffering a broken ankle, but he came back to smash records, and Eastern experts are recalling that surprise in figuring that Bill may be planning another return to the track. Eastman will have plenty of tough opposition even if Carr is out, as Robertson hopes to line up for the event Glenn Hardin, Bernie McCafferty, Wayland Dunaway and possibly one or two others.

CLAIRE CRIBBS . . . LEADS LOCAL COLLEGE SCORERS

SPORT VIGNETTES

If Cliff Montgomery, the Columbia football quarterback and captain, didn't do anything else in his broadcast over WCAE and WJAS in connection with that banquet his home town tendered him last night, he cleared up the mystery of that alleged "hidden ball" play with which Columbia scored the only touchdown of its Tournament of Roses game against Stanford last New Years Day . . . Funny thing about that play . . . It was described over the air and in the newspapers as a "hidden ball" play, and many listeners and readers bombarded the newspapers demanding to know how come the play was allowed when they understood the hidden ball deception had been ruled out of the book back in the dark days after Pop Warner had one of his Carlisle Indians hide the ball inside his jersey and meander down to the goal line for a touchdown against fair Harvard.

Well, this Columbia play wasn't exactly that sort of a "hidden ball" maneuver. . . . . The ball was there in plain sight throughout, with the carrier making some attempt to conceal it legitimately while a lot of faking was going on in the Columbia backfield. . . . Anyway, here's what happened, according to Montgomery, and he should know, for he was the gent who called the play and had a hand in the black magic which made it seem to disappear in the backfield.

Cliff has the floor; listen closely: . . . "The play was a reverse run from a single wing back formation that shifted to the right. The ball was snapped back from Wilder, the center, to me. I started to my right, made a half turn and slipped the ball to Barabas, who was in fullback position and in the same line with me. Barabas took the ball and ran around the weak side, hiding the ball behind his left hip. I continued with my spin and faked giving the ball to Brominski, as I usually did when Ed kept the ball. Brominski faked taking the ball and ran off the short side tackle with two running linemen leading and Nevel blocking out the short side end. Nevel had lined up in quarterback position a yard behind the right guard. The interference ran inside, as it did on a regular reverse run with Brominski carrying. The end watched Brominski, thinking he had the ball, while Barabas galloped over for a touchdown."

Here are a few Cliff Montgomeryisms: . . . "I'd like to be a football coach, now that my playing days are over, but I'd hate to be a failure. . . . I'd like to be as good as Lou Little, the Columbia coach, but there are few that good. . . . Garry LeVan, the Princeton back of the past season, was the greatest offensive player I ever played against; Bobby Grayson, of Stanford, the greatest combination offensive and defensive player, and Bart Viviano, of Cornell, the greatest defensive player. . . . They seem to have bigger football players in California, but it takes more than mere size to make a good football team."—HARRY KECK.

STAGE SET FOR TORRID BATTLE BETWEEN CITY COLLEGE VARSITIES

By JESS CARVER

The Pitt Panthers are in a resentful mood and their resentment isn't directed primarily at their opponents of the hour, Duquesne's Dukes.

The noble Panthers figured they had the stage all set for a bit of streak-cracking tonight as they squared off against the Dukes in the second game of the annual two-game series in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion, a series which only became an annual affair last year. Having clipped Notre Dame's 22-game string of triumphs a couple weeks ago, the Pitts were laying for the Dukes and what they, the Pitts, hoped would be a bright and shining 25-game string of consecutive triumphs.

But Westminster's tall Titans beat the locals to the break Saturday night as they took the Dukes over in Sharon. So it is toward the Westminsters that the Pitts are directing their more baleful glances, although their feelings toward the Dukes hardly come under the brotherly love classification.

PANTHERS DETERMINED

Beaten four times in as many starts by the Dukes, and by a single point in the last three games, the Panthers are not a bit backward in predicting that they'll put a stop to all this foolishness in tonight's game. They might even be said to be cocky about it. Since their amazing about-face in the Notre Dame game, when they suddenly clicked and turned out to be a mighty formidable basketball team, the Panthers have been setting their caps for the Dukes, and if you'll thumb through the pages of history, you'll see that when a Pitt team goes cap-setting, someone usually loses their shirt.

Back in 1932, the Panthers, Pullman-worn after a long jaunt across the continent, lost to the Red and Blue, 28 to 21. Last year, they bowed, 26 to 25 and 25 to 24, and in the first game of the present campaign were nosed out, 30 to 29. There you have the history of this young, but lusty series.

Somewhat tired, but relieved of the strain that accompanied their sensational drive through 24 successive games without defeat, the Dukes will enter tonight's clash anxious to make up for Saturday's loss to Westminster; to continue their mastery over the Panthers and their reign as city champions. Coach Chick Davies plans to start his regular lineup, using Irv Brenner at center again, bum side or no bum side. Feldman and Birch will go at the forwards and Marty Reiter and Dudey Moore at the guards.

LINEUP SET

The Panthers, too, have all hands available, and will toss the Skip and Charley Hughes-Cribbs-Ochsenhirt-McCamant into the arena, a combination that is no setup for any opposition.

Another capacity crowd is anticipated, and if you are an old behoover, it will behoove you to get out to the Stadium Pavilion early. After all, the freshman preliminary will be a duel worth taking in. The probable varsity lineup:

Pitt.		Duquesne.
W. Hughes	F.	Feldman
McCamant	F.	Birch
Cribbs	C.	Brenner
Ochsenhirt	G.	Moore
C. Hughes	G.	Reiter

Referee—Hetra, Westminster. Umpire—Heider, Waynesburg.

BACH AT FETE OF SCRIBES

Joe Bach, recently elevated from the position of line coach to that of head football coach at Duquesne University, and Wilkinsburg, Bill McKechnie, manager of the Boston Braves, today were added to the list of sports celebrities who are to be honored at the local sports writers' dinner and roundup in the ballroom of the Hotel Schenley at 6:30 Sunday night. There is a chance that John Heydler, National League president, also will attend. Art Strutt and George Rado, Duquesne football stars, will appear in a skit.

The scribes, who are to put on satirical sketches as part of an entertainment program which also will include orchestra music and addresses by athletic celebrities, are to sharpen their barbs, the better to lampoon their victims, at a dress rehearsal at the Schenley tomorrow night.

J. J. Freund, Jr., veteran local basketball leader, is making the dinner the occasion for a reunion of old-time floor stars, and those wishing to sit at the old-timers' table should call Freund at Everglade 4297. Others wishing to attend may make reservations by calling John Hernon, general chairman, at Atlantic 6580.

YAROSZ BACK IN TRAINING

Ted Yarosz was due to engage in his second boxing workout today since he resumed training following his recent illness which caused postponement of his 15-round bout for the state middleweight title with Jimmy Smith at Motor Square Garden. The match is set now for next Monday.

Yarosz went on the road for 14 miles on Sunday and said he felt fine. He boxed yesterday and will increase the dose today.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

Cecil Payne and Henry Woods have been rematched for a 10-round bout in Seattle next Tuesday night, two weeks from the night Payne handed the Coast Negro star his first defeat in 56 starts. Woods was floored six times.

Charley Harvey, manager of Steve Hamas, rates Tommy Loughran at the top of the heavyweight division, with Max Baer, second; Champion Primo Carnera, third; Hamas, fourth; Max Schmeling, fifth, and King Levinsky, sixth. He says Tommy belongs up there on his record of achievement.

Charley Massera, of Monongahela, faces his toughest test to date when he meets King Levinsky in New York's Madison Square Garden Friday night.

It is said both Battling Shaw, former junior welterweight championship claimant, and Eddie Ran declined to box Fritzie Zivic, local ringster, in a six-round bout in Los Angeles tonight, after Fritzie recently knocked out Baby Sal Sorio in a Coast bout. As a result, Fritzie is in with one Perfecto Lopez in a special bout on a bill headed by Johnny Freeman and Art Lasky, heavyweights.

Tiger Joe Randall, Negro welterweight, of Clairton, now located in Canton, O., is boxing Lee Cox at Sandusky, O., next Friday night, and there is talk of a match for him with Joey Bazzone in McKeesport, which sounds like a natural for that spot.

KNIGHT HOLDS MAXIE EVEN

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom still ruled the light-heavyweight roost today, but minus a handful of tail feathers, plucked out by the up and coming Joe Knight, of Cairo, Ga., in a fiercely fought 15-round title bout here that ended in a draw.

In his first crack at a world championship during his colorful career, the slugging Southerner rushed the Harlem playboy about the canvas with surprising speed and punch and only missed gaining possession of the crown by virtue of a last-minute rally by the titleholder. The fight, held in the Madison Square Garden arena, was the first championship bout staged in Florida in 40 years, and was watched by approximately 23,000 spectators. Garden officials said the gate receipts were approximately $35,000.

Leon See's 'Inside Story' Of Carnera's Career

EDITORIAL FOREWORD

The author already has described Primo's first (1930) American tour beginning with the minute-or-so K. O. of Big Boy Peterson in January and winding up with the highly questionable win decision given Jimmy Maloney at Boston early in October. Carnera and the author sail for Italy, but—before describing their European campaigns late in 1930—Mr. See cuts back to his giant's boyhood and starved youth, a remarkable study of the raw material out of which a world champion was made. . . .

By LEON SEE

CHAPTER XIX.
PRIMO'S CHILDHOOD

During many hours on trains, boats and even airplanes while on our journeys from one state or one nation to another, the giant Italian loved to tell me of his none too happy youth. And the word which came most often to his lips was—"hungry."

From his childhood up to the day when chance brought him to me, the great preoccupation of Primo—his perpetual problem—was: to eat—to satisfy the insatiable appetite of a child, then that of an adolescent of abnormally rapid growth with an always empty stomach.

Primo Carnera

Primo seemed to have been hungry as far back as he could remember. He was 8 years old when the World War broke out and his earlier memories do not go beyond a little home in the Udine mountain country, where misery often reigned, where one ate meat but rarely, and where he usually left the family table with an apetite but partially satisfied.

During the war there was famine and during the years which followed there were continued privations, making it even more difficult for Primo's ever-growing appetite. Years passed and he was still hungry—when he worked as a cement maker . . . when he was a carpenter . . . during his hard years with the traveling fair. Indeed, he seems to have passed all his youth being hungry. But let him speak for himself. This is, in substance, what he told me often:

HIS OWN STORY

I was born at Sequals, in the Italian province of Udine, October 25, 1906. Sequals is a village of a few hundred inhabitants not far from Spilimbergo, where the inhabitants, from fathers to sons, have been specialists at mosaic work for ages.

My father is named Sante and my mother Giovanna. As my name indicates, I was the oldest child; I have two brothers, Secundo and Severino.

My father was very poor; he could seldom find work except in foreign lands. I remember that before the war, he was almost always in Germany. From time to time, my mother received a little money from him, but there were hard times when the kitchen pot was empty and when my brothers and myself went barefoot in the field in search of roots.

My mother belonged to one of the oldest families in the country and it is from this side that I draw my athletic qualities. Her grandfather, Ventura Mazziol, was as large and as strong as myself, they say. In the country, legends were told, coming down from other ages, which attributed to him almost unbelievable feats of strength. In any case, Signor Mazziol must have been a very strong man and one who never complained. My mother told me that he died, accidentally. This is how he met his fate.

Signor Mazziol had a pigeon-house in his garden and one day he climbed a ladder to fix its roof. As he was very heavy the ladder broke and he fell from a height of six meters (more than 20 feet) landing upright on his heels. He did not say a word, went to yoke his oxen, traveled on foot five kilometers (more than three miles) and suddenly fell dead when he was loading the wagon with hay.

My mother had four sisters and two brothers; the latter, large and vigorous.

My memories of infancy are rather vague. I was awkward, poorly balanced, of exaggerated growth, and I often hurt myself while playing.

ALMOST A CRIPPLE

I remember one day I had gone to the neighboring village of Meduno, hanging on to the rear of a neighbor's wagon. Stupidly, I fell to the ground and one of the wheels of the wagon, fortunately empty, passed over my leg. This kept me in bed six months and I still feel the effect of that accident sometimes. I remember also that my brothers and I were always barefoot and never pampered in any way, but we children were—best of all—never sick.

Another memory comes back often and that is about the day I was playing in a field with my little cousins. A cow hurt one of them with a kick. I approached to lift her up when the cow went for me. I fled desperately, scared to death. For the rest of my life I'll have an instinctive terror of horned beasts. Yes, I assure you, that as a toreador (unlike Paulino) I would never excel.

My mother, I realize it today, worked herself to the limit for us all. From dawn she cultivated the EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: UNARMED OFFICERS OF THE LAW—Most large cities of the world maintain police forces whose members are equipped at all times with high-powered automatic guns, sometimes concealed under the officer's coat and sometimes worn in holsters on an ammunition belt. In extreme cases the officers are equipped with machine guns, tear gas bombs and armored cars. In no large city is law and order more successfully maintained than in London, yet the famous "bobbies" never carry guns on regular duty—only a short club, which they blithely swing from their wrists. UNPHOTOGRAPHED PHOTOGRAPHER—Joseph Nicephore Niepce (1765-1833), who is acknowledged by Daguerre to have been the inventor of photography, died unphotographed himself. He discovered the sensitivity to light of asphalt plates, and by this means reproduced a portrait of Pope Pius VII for the first time in 1813. He took "still life" mostly, the exposures lasting for hours.

TOMORROW: CLOTHES MAGIC.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Sparks should fly as progressive flint strikes reactionary steel in discussion of American Davis Cup policy at the annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis Association at the P. A. A. here Friday and Saturday. Of all the incendiary topics slated to generate heat at the coming conclave, the matter of Uncle Sam's past and future excursions in quest of the historic symbol of international net supremacy ranks as by all odds the most controversial.

For many years a subject packing dynamite, the Davis Cup problem long antedates tne loss of the bowl in 1927. It is, in fact, an offshoot of the perennial contest between the older generation and the younger, an outgrowth of the resentment emanating from what the active players apparently feel to be too much of a we-tell-'em-they-hit-'em attitude on the part of committees of old-timers chosen by the U. S. L. T. A. to guide the destinies of the American teams that have gone forth sometimes successfully but of late disastrously to uphold national prestige against foreign racquet foes.

If the ever-present source of contention had perchance been lulled into temporary slumber, it was rudely jolted from somnolence several weeks ago by that proverbially outspoken storm king of the sport, William Tatem Tilden II, who, in perhaps the most widely noted and quoted article yet to spring from his prolific pen, expounded to readers of a national weekly his distinctly anti-committee views on the conduct.

The reasonable probability of the situation is that there is considerable to be said pro and con on both sides of the issue.

There's no time like the present to introduce reform into the Davis Cup setup, which has unquestionably passed beyond the limits envisioned by the donor of the trophy, mushroomed from friendly competition between two countries into a mighty network that borders closely upon an all-year-round international industry.

YOUNG CORBETT WINS

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6.—(AP.)—Young Corbett III, who retired from the ring after losing the welterweight championship eight months ago, opened a comeback campaign as a middleweight last night with a one-sided 10-round victory over Babe Marino, of San Francisco.

MEMORY TEST

TODAY'S QUESTIONS

(How good is your memory of sporting events? Can you recall feats, heroes and dates? Every day the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will ask five questions in the sports section and answer them in the Want Ad pages the following day.)

1—Who preceded Pop Warner as coach at the University of Pittsburgh?

3—How many times did Harry Greb box Gene Tunney?

4—What were the scores of Pitt's two Tournament of Roses football games with Southern California?

5—Who was the greatest college basketball player ever developed in Pittsburgh (popular consensus)?

NAVY DEMOTES RIP MILLER

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Feb. 6.—(AP.—Lieut. Thomas Hamilton will supplant Edgar A. (Rip) Miller as head football coach at the United States Naval Academy, it has been learned here.

Miller, however, will remain at the academy as civilian coach, giving the major portion of his attention to the line.

Athletic authorities at the academy refused to comment on the change today. Last fall they announced that Hamilton was coming to the academy as "assistant director of football," a new title, but that Miller's contract had been renewed. It was not until today that it became generally known that when spring practice starts on March 4, Hamilton will be in charge.

Boxing Commission Inspector Named

Pittsburgh's first Negro boxing commission deputy inspector has just been appointed and will begin his duties at an early show, it was announced today by Boxing Commissioner Dr. William D. McClelland.

The new deputy is John Baker Thompson, 29, of 2429 Wadsworth street, a member of the Emmett A. C. His appointment was made from Harrisburg.

SOCCER REPLAY HERE SUNDAY

The replay of the Curry-Cleveland Slavia soccer game, called at the end of 90 minutes last Sunday at Greenlee Field, will be at the same feld next Sunday afternoon.

The local soccer commissioner today received a telegram from Jim Armstrong, secretary of the United States Soccer Football, advising him of this decision of the cup committee. The telegram asked that the name of the referee be submitted. Trysull Evans has been assigned.

Referee Pete McArdle failed to go into an extra-time period last Sunday, and the Slavia team, taking advantage of this, left the playing field and refused to return. He had the game gone the extra 30 minutes and then finished in a tie it would have been replayed at Cleveland. The National body decided the game was not officially completed.

FRIENDS HONOR MONTGOMERY

Cliff Montgomery returns to his classes at Columbia University today knowing how it feels to be the toast of the community in which he lives.

The Columbia quarterback, who led his team to its thrilling victory over Stanford in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena on New Year's Day was honored at a rousing testimonial dinner at the Brackenridge Heights Country Club last night. With becoming modesty he heard his fellow townsmen sing his praises as an athlete and a gentleman. Then he responded with an appreciative talk, after being presented a fine traveling bag and kit.

Coach Lou Little, of the Lions, was unable to attend, but Herb Kopf, former Wash-Jeff star, backfield coach at Columbia, was on hand and brought along movies of the Rose Bowl game, which were shown.

LACROSSE LOOP REORGANIZES

JACKETS ROUT BUFFALO BY 21-9 SCORE

By CARL W. SHATTO

The North American Professional Lacrosse Association is being rebuilt at a meeting of representatives of the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets, Chicago Blue Ribbons, Milwaukee Brewers and Buffalo Indians here today.

The association was dealt a couple hefty blows to the midsection shortly before the season opened when Indianapolis and Toronto, holders of franchises in the loop, were unable to obtain suitable home courts. Toronto played one game here, and Indianapolis played not at all, but despite these disappointments the circuit managed to get on very nicely until about 10 days ago, when the Milwaukee team was transferred to Chicago.

PROGRESS REPORTED

This quick shift left the Blue Ribbons rather crowded; so much so, in fact, that they were just about nudged out of their own home town. With the Milwaukee Brewers, alias Chicago Bruins, the Indians and Yellow Jackets the only teams boasting home followings, it was deemed advisable to take some action.

A preliminary meeting, held last night, produced no definite results, and the representatives of the clubs resumed their parley this morning. Shortly before noon it was reported by Larry Welch, manager of the local team, that some progress had been made, and that indications were that the reorganization work would be completed by evening. There is a possibility that the loop may go unchanged, but there is a much stronger possibility that new member cities will be added.

The Jackets gave the visiting firemen and some 3,500 local fans an artistic display of how the game should be played at Motor Square Garden last night as they won their fourth game in five starts against the Buffalo Indians, 21 to 9. The Redskins played as though some Dutchman had just given them a string of beads for Manhattan Island, and they waded through about 27 minutes of battling (almost two full periods) before bagging their first goal.

LONGBOAT INJURED

The battle produced plenty of fast lacrosse, but little of the bloodshed which local fans had learned to associate with Jacket-Indian meetings. Longboat, of the Tribe, was the victim of the only gore spilling. His head was cut open in the second period when Claude Jennings accidentally brought his stick down on the visitor's scalp while letting go at a hot shot at the cage. Four stitches were required to pull and hold Longboat together again. The Jackets are not to make another home appearance until a week from tonight, when they will oppose the former Milwaukee team at the Garden. The lineup:

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

Hal Chase, baseball outcast, has been the theme of many a harsh tale . . . Here's one in a softer strain and entirely new . . . The stirring story with a tear radiates around a scrappy football star whose catch of a forward pass at Forbes Field in 1921 gave Wash-Jeff an upset victory over Pitt . . . Herb Kopf came to town yesterday to attend the Cliff Montgomery testimonial dinner at Natrona . . . The assistant coach of the splendid Columbia eleven had time to step into the Sun-Tele sports department to renew acquaintances he had made while playing for the Presidents a dozen years ago.

Herb is the youngest of four Kopf brothers of Waterbury, Conn., his brother Larry having been the clever shortstop of the Cincinnati Reds in their great pennant year of 1919 . . . During the fanning bee Herb told of his pathetic meeting with the expelled diamond star, whose skill around first base has never been matched in baseball. The Columbia grid squad spent a week in Tucson, where Chase, spurned by his oldtime friends and baseball in general, is trying hard to eke out an existence. . . When the Pirates played in Tucson last spring, Hal came around, but the poor fellow was given short shrift by most of the Buccos . . . The arrival of Columbia gave him a chance to see Charley Barrett, trainer of the Lions, who was in the same capacity with the New York Yankees in the days of Hal's glory. . . But let Kopf tell it:

"We were getting aboard the flyer for the trip to Los Angeles. Barrett and I were ready to climb aboard the rear car when Chase appeared. He was a picture of dejection, but apparently he found a little ray of comfort in going to the depot to say goodby to Barrett . . . . As I looked on this once glorified figure, I suddenly felt severe pangs that brought tears to my eyes. . . . In an instant my mind went back 15 years to a summer day in Waterbury. . . . The Reds, in honor of my brother, came to our home for a game. . .Naturally, I was right up against the Red bench as soon as they landed at the field. . . Hal was my hero. During the game, Chase called me to him and presented me a Red sweater, with the permission of the manager. . . I think I walked on the air as I journeyed home after that game. . . I never shall forget that thrill. . .

"Those were the memories that shot through me at that desolate desert station as I stared at the object of my boyhood adulation . . . Forsaken and hungry he appeared . . . The train was ready to move, fortunately, as the scene had caused me to fold up . . . I asked Barrett if he thought Hal would take a couple of dollars if they were offered him.

"Charley's nod indicated he would take a quarter with thanks. It seemed to relieve my feelings to place the bills in his hand . . . As the last car rolled out, I could see Chase's face in the dim light . . . He was crying."

Herbert has been mentioned as possible head coach at several large institutions of learning, but so far he has made no decisions . . . He has not lost one grain of the aggressiveness he had when he played for Greasy Neale at Little Washington . . . And, by the way, Kopf thinks Neale is unappreciated as a football mentor and leader of boys.

BUTCH, LITFIN K. O. VICTORS

The boys were in knockout strides at the Palisades, McKeesport, last night as the professionals fought a four-bout program. Three of the bouts wound up in knockouts.

In the main go, Mose Butch, of Oakland, weighing 125½ pounds, knocked out Ritchie Carter, of New York, subbing for Benny Schwartz, in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round battle. Butch dropped his opponent for a count of nine before putting him away for good in the fourth frame.

Harry Bauman, also of New York, was knocked kicking by Nat Litfin, of the Hill, in the third round of a mix scheduled for 10. Litfin weighed 122 pounds against 117 for his opponent.

Tony Ross, of Pittsburgh, went out in the sixth round of his bout with Andy Maskey, of Canton, O., and Jackie McFarland, another Canton entry, defeated Johnny Birek, of the South Side, in six rounds, gaining Referee Grayber's vote after the judges, Phil Scello and Mike Moran, had failed to agree.

fields and toiled without ever complaining at the hardest tasks or misfortunes. She is a saint to me—my supreme favorite!

I remember further that my grandfather's sister (the very sight of whom terrified me) was the bonesetter of the village. She was said to know all the secrets of the herbs and also how to make medicines. I was scarcely healed of the accident to my left leg when I immediately hurt my right knee in a fall, a sprain resulting.

There was no doctor in the town and, besides, my mother was not rich enough to call a professional man. It was the lady bonesetter who took care of me and who cured me completely. Without her I might have been a cripple all my life and it would have been impossible for me to box.

I was five or six years old, perhaps, when my mother left to join my father in Germany and I was placed with my grandparents. From time to time my father returned to the village and brought us some clothing.

THEN . . . THE WAR

Then came the war when I was 8 years old. My father was mobilized in August, 1914, at Genoa. He later dug trenches at the front. From 1914 to 1917, misery ruled. I worked in the field to earn a few cents, but this hard labor only increased my appetite which made my always insatiable stomach more exacting.

In 1907, Sequals was invaded. I saw cannons and machine guns pass with innumerable regiments. The Germans established themselves as masters in our village. They requisitioned everything—chickens, pigs, cows, crops. I believe that never in my life was I so hungry. I even remember eating grass when I could not find any roots! There were plenty of chestnuts, but the Germans "verboten" our taking them.

I was frightfully thin, but in spite of such privations, my growth took on extraordinary proportions. I had a head much larger than children of my age, and my feet began to grow to alarming dimensions.

One day I left very early in the morning to collect some dead wood, because the winter was very cold. Always clumsy, following a slip, I took a violent fall which hurt my right leg badly. It was a German major who took care of me. To thank him, my mother gave him some potatoes, having no money.

Then there came the Armistice and the departure of the Germans. The inhabitants of Sequals threw stones at the retreating enemy. I was 12 years old then and already had the height of an average man.

NEVER ATTENDED SCHOOL

Another war-time memory: Some food had arrived at the village. I do not know from where. There was feasting to celebrate the 1918 victory. In all the houses, even in the poorest ones, there were incredible quantities of "polenta," a sort of coarse cornmeal. Never had I seen so much of it. Many of the inhabitants of Sequals died that night from indigestion. I, too, was sick for eight days. For once I had eaten to my capacity . . .

My father returned home to work on the construction of a bridge. His salary was small and the normal misery continued. The bridge finished, father became one of the many unemployed. This was no longer poverty, it was the most complete destitution. My father left for Egypt, where he hoped to find work and did.

I was growing all the time. My schooling had been greatly neglected. I barely knew how to read and write. In fact, I did not even know how to speak Italian because, in the province of Udine, the peasants spoke only a local dialect. Alas, I have never been to school.

CITY LEAGUERS RENEW FIGHT FOR TITLES

By JULIUS LEVY

The members of the two sections of the City High School League swing back into action this afternoon after a week of idleness due to the mid-year graduations.

With Connelley Trade School pressing South High School, defending City League champion, in Section I and four teams deadlocked for the top position in Section II, local basketball fans are anticipating a neck-and-neck struggle down the home stretch.

Today's contests marking the opening of the second-half second, find Connelley at Schenley, Peabody at Westinghouse and Allderdice at Fifth Avenue in Section I, while in Section II, the four-way deadlock is bound to be shattered as Langley plays at Carrick in the feature struggle. Perry, defending titleholder in this division, also shares the top position and will oppose Allegheny in the Phipps Gymnasium. Allegheny Vocational plays at Oliver in the third contest. South Hills, involved in the four-way deadlock, remains idle insofar as league competition is concerned.

TRADERS STILL IN RACE

Connelley Trade School, one full game behind the South High Orioles, has a chance to reduce that margin to a half game by taking Schenley into camp this afternoon. South was the only school to defeat Connelley in the first half of the season and the Traders hope to obtain revenge for that setback later in the season when they invade the South Side Market House for a return engagement.

The Orioles are riding along on a 20-game winning streak in the City League, having won all of their contests during the past two seasons. They won 12 in a row in taking their sectional crown last season, defeated Perry in straight sets in the City League playoffs and so far this season have captured six successive league verdicts. Their lineup intact, having lost no players during the mid-year graduations, South Hills is well situated for the drive down the home stretch and it is going to prove a task for Connelley to overtake the defending titleholder.

The race in Section II should prove a wide open affair with Carrick, Perry, South Hills and Langley all bidding for the title. Unexpected setbacks handed South Hills and Langley paved the way for the tie for the top berth.

WIDE OPEN RACE

The program of games scheduled for W. P. I. A. L. tonight is a light one, only 10 of the 19 sections being booked for contests.

The Junior W. P. I. A. L. offers one game with Belle Vernon's Jack Rabbits opposing Monessen in Section I.

While the Catholic High School League enjoys a day of rest, three contests will be played in Section I and two in Section II of the City Junior League. In Section I, Schenley plays Baxter. Arsenal at Liberty and Gladstone at Herron Hill. Overbrook is at Latimer and Knoxville at Washington Trade in Section II.

Navy Teams Enter Hearst Rifle Shoot

STOCK MARKET BULLS' FERVOR COOLS OFF

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—Bullish fervor in the financial markets was not so pronounced today, but selective buying in both stocks and bonds tended to offset a considerable amount of profit-taking.

Although equities were still active, volume dwindled on the moderate declines. Some of the utilities and metals moved substantially higher, but other groups were hesitant. Grains sagged in the early hours. Cotton, silver and rubber were firm. Listed loans were rather narrow. The dollar declined nearly 4 cents in terms of the British pound and about .14 of a cent in relation to the French franc.

Shares of United States Smelting got up 3 points, while American Smelting and Cerro de Pasco were a point or more higher. The farm group improved, with Case advancing 2. American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Gas and Public Service of New Jersey gained about a point each. Amusement issues were a bit higher. The steels and rails eased and some of the oils were soft. The alcohols did little. A few of the chain store issues were again in demand.

Declaration of a dividend of 15 cents a share by Socony-Vacuum, against a 25-cent disbursement last December, brought some realizing in the petroleum section. At the same time directors of Columbian Carbon voted a 25-cent extra.

Brokerage opinion, while optimistic on the whole, was rather mixed as to near-term stock trends. Some commentators felt that a siz able reaction was overdue, but others, pointing to the recently buoyant bond market, were inclined to see only minor recessions in the push toward higher levels.

A cashing in of gains by several foreign operators was reported by houses that usually handle considerable European business. The overnight reversal of foreign exchange rates was attributed partly to selling of securities from London, Paris and Amsterdam.

Another factor that tended to engender caution at this stage of the advance was the absence of any extensive short position notwithstanding that some issues have established new peaks since 1931 and, ordinarily, would be open to bearish attacks. Many of the "shorts," it was said, have been discouraged by the unusually large margin requirements now in force and also by the fear of Washington developments.

Followers of silver, who interpreted the start of an inquiry by the Treasury Department into holdings of the metal as a prelude to "something" further being done for their favorite, were not too enthusiastic over advices from the capital that the investigation was for the purpose of determining the speculative phase of silver rather than an expansion of the government's purchasing program.

WHEAT PRICES TAKE DIP

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—Wheat prices underwent something of a setback early today after an irregular start. Buying was not of a sustained character, and selling increased sufficiently to drag values downward. Opening at 1/8 decline to 1/4 advance, wheat later sagged all around. Corn started 3/8 off to 1/8 up, and subsequently held near the initial limits.

Rallies which took place in the wheat market lifted Chicago prices at times to about equal with yesterday's finish. Price upturns here, however, failed to hold, and the market dropped lower than before, going at one stage a full cent under the final quotations of yesterday. Corn and oats averaged lower with wheat.

Securities Rise; Gain In Orders

By B. C. FORBES

THE WEEK opened cheerfully.

The two most important barometers of sentiment and conditions in America—whether we like to admit it or not—are the New York Stock Exchange and the Chicago wheat pit. Both registered rising quotations when business was resumed yesterday morning.

Mr. Forbes

This is not astonishing, especially in view of the voluminous influx of money which left the country last year when acute uncertainty reigned concerning what might happen to our currency.

All threatenings of a "commodity," or "rubber" dollar having subsided and our currency having been anchored to gold, both those who rushed wealth out of this country and important foreign investors are now anxious to put capital to remunerative use here.

A broad demand for American investment stocks and for American bonds will be logical.

Shrewd investors have been buying preferred stocks and also bonds yielding high returns, anywhere from 7 per cent to almost twice as much. They have acted on the theory that were the gold content of the dollar cut in half and were the cost of living to rise substantially, they would enjoy an income sufficient to meet the new conditions comfortably.

The writer invested modestly last year in bonds selling under 50 cents on the dollar and now finds that they have appreciated in value anywhere from 50 to 75 per cent.

He has sufficient faith in the value of America to exchange issues which already have almost doubled in value for others, less secure, which are selling much lower, but are regularly paying their interest.

Also, he regards as attractive various preferred shares of well-managed corporations which are selling drastically below par.

DURING THE greater part of last year it wasn't easy to gather for this column encouraging facts and figures—men of affairs were extremely hesitant to talk and not so very many organizations could point to substantial improvement in their business.

Rightly or wrongly, the writer reasoned that no useful purpose could be served by harping day after day upon depressing business developments.

How different it is today!

This column could be filled daily with encouraging facts and figures sent in by industrial and other executives. That recovery is under way cannot be doubted.

FRANC RALLIES, DOLLAR OFF

Associated Press.

The headlong drop in the French franc was checked today, and bonds of the gold bloc countries rallied in principal securities markets.

The active American gold buying in London appeared to be taking effect, and the dollar came down nearer its new gold parity.

The dollar closed in London at 4.96½ to the pound, as American gold buying continued, and the pound was later quoted close to $4.97 in New Yorfi, up nearly 4 cents.

Dollars reacted against the French franc in Paris, and later in New York, the franc was quoted as high as 6.32 cents, having recovered .13 of a cent from yesterday's close. At this rate, the franc was still at a discount of about 4 per cent.

New York banking quarters had felt some uncertainty over the franc, in view of a report that the Bank of France was requiring 48 hours' notice before paying out gold, but it was explained later that this report was inaccurate, that the bank had merely requested those planning large gold withdrawals to give notice the night before.

FOURTH DEGREE

By K. S. DAIGER

CHAPTER XXIX.

The Inquisition—I believe third degree is the technical term, but I have always preferred the more descriptive phrase—the Inquisition of Tim Stokes took place that night in the office of Capt. Andy at headquarters. Anderson was there, of course, and Carroll and Capt. Mahler, head of the district, representatives of all newspapers and press services, and even Commissioner of Police Barrett put in an appearance before the interview was over. One person was conspicuous by his absence and that was Kirk Judson. He was keeping his promise to let the police grab all the glory with a vengeance.

All of the papers had issued extras and once again Judson found himself the hero of the hour. Anderson had issued a statement stating the source of the arrest, and the press was liberal in giving credit where credit was due. But Inspector Anderson and his men were nevertheless highly complimented on the masterly way in which they had conducted the investigation and had taken Stokes into custody.

There were all kinds of pictures, most of them of an ancient vintage dug out of the dusty newspaper morgues. Kirk Judson made the front page in a tuxedo and derby hat, photo taken about 15 years earlier. Mrs. Phelps was there in a decollete evening gown; another of the Phelps' home at Towson with an "X" showing the sleeping room of the erstwhile departed Tilly. A third showed the Exeter street house with a photo-diagram explaining how the police had cornered their prey. And a little head of Sunny Paige beside a magnificent close-up of Tim Stokes, three columns wide. In short, it was a grand and glorious night for the press.

City Agog

Every sheet carried a complete and none too accurate account of Stokes' visit to the Paige estate, with such embellishments as the individual writers thought added to the description. Wires direct from police headquarters to the city desks were kept open. Word had gone out that there would be another extra later that night, and Tim's story—whether denial or confession—would soon be shouted to the high heavens by the hundreds of little newsies who lolled around the newspaper buildings.

All of Baltimore was agog, and indeed I cannot remember another night when excitement ran quite so high, not even when Walter Socolow was convicted in the Norris murder or when Jack Hart made his sensational jail-break.

Stokes was led into the inspector's office, manacled to a deputy sheriff. He wore no collar or tie and was unshaven and dirty. Gone was his debonair manner of the afternoon. He was frightened, even trembling a little when he saw the mob of men, and he wore a hang-dog expression—guilt, if I ever saw it, written all over him.

Firm in Denial

"You can sit here," said Anderson, pointing to a chair where a huge calcium light would fall squarely on the man's face. "Now, Stokes, first I shall warn you that this is a confession by your own desire. Anything that you say may be used against you. You may talk or not just as you like. I'm not particularly interested in any statement that you make. I just want to tell you a little of what we have on you."

"But I ain't confessed," protested Tim, to whom this opening line of conversation was a little speedy. "I told you that I didn't do it—and I don't know who done it!"

"First of all, we'll start off with your record," said the inspector, picking up a sheet of paper from his desk. "I'm going to refresh your memory by reading it to you. It's pretty long, so long, in fact, that I am afraid you may have forgotten it."

He began to read aloud, and I am reproducing the record exactly as it appeared in the Bertillon files of the Baltimore Police Department.

Long Record

4-12-99—San Francisco, No. 1492 as Timothy James Stokes, Bill Murphy; charge, burglary; sent to California State School during minority.

9-18-12—Seattle, Washington, as 4572 as Deadeye Tim. Charge burglary. Case settled.

15-7-14 — Portland, Oregon, No. 3009, as R. P. Skinner. Charge, burglary of jewels. Sentenced 1-15 years in Oregon Penitentiary. Secured a new trial and was released.

12-8-15—Montana Penitentiary, No. 4327 as "Tim Stokes." Charge, gem theft. 2 to 9 years. Paroled 6-9-17.

29-2-18—Indianapolis, Ind. Vag. and investigation over disappearance of Mrs. Fountleroy.

21-3-19 — Utah Penitentiary, No. 1205 as Timothy James Stokes. Charge, theft of Nordia jewels. Indeterminate term. Released 12-4-21.

2-5-22—Broke jail in Canon City, Colo., while being held for New York, N. Y., where he was later tried for burglary. No disposition.

10-7-23—Chicago, Ill., as "Tim Stokes." Charge, theft of jewelry store. Convicted and sentenced from 2 to 20 years. Paroled 4-5-25.

"How about that?" asked Anderson when he finished. "I see that you take a certain interest in jewels, Tim. One of your specialties, isn't it?"

"But that paper don't say I ever done murder," pointed out Tim with a certain pride.

"It doesn't say so—yet," answered the Inspector. "But give us time to fit it up to date, Tim—give us time."

Synopsis

Murder was suspected when Sonia Paige, wife of socially prominent Randolph Paige, was found hanging to a chandelier in her home. Paige and Mrs. Deane, the housekeeper, fail to give the police any clues. Kirk Judson, a shady private detective, is engaged by Paige when police begin their investigation. Robert Cleveland, prominent attorney, says that he was in love with Mrs. Paige and told her so when he visited her home with Mrs. Phelps, a neighbor, on the night of the murder. Paige admits to the police that he took a jewel owned by his wife to get money to cover tock market losses. Judson reports to Anderson that he knows the murderer. He names Tim Stokes, a friend of Mrs. Phelps' maid. Stokes is arrested, but claims innocence.

Now Go On

"Well, I never done it anyhow," reiterated Tim doggedly.

"But you were there at the Paige house the night Mrs. Paige was killed, weren't you? I'll warn you, Stokes, that we already know the truth. Tilly has confessed."

Stokes' Story

"Then she musta told you that me and her didn't have no more to do with it than a couple of Fiji Islanders. Sure we was there, Tilly, she says to me, oh, about a month ago, that this here Mrs. Paige has a very valuable jewel—worth a million, she says, because it once belonged to the granddaughter of old Queen Vic. She promised to make the lay-out and tip me off when the gentleman ain't home."

"Go ahead and not quite so fast," prompted Anderson. "The stenographer can't get it when you mumble your words like that."

"We sets the night for last Monday," he boomed. "Tilly she tells me that the housekeeper is going away and that Mr. Paige he ain't home either. Sometime during the day when she's over there at the Paige house she slips down the cellar and unlocks a window and as soon as it gets dark that night I circles around the house. Tilly's house, I mean. We waits until her madam leaves with a gent in an automobile and then we beat it for the other place.

"You locked it after you as you entered?"

"Why, Cap, I should hope not. You know better than that. We opens it wide in case we has to make a quick getaway."

"Then you went upstairs?" asked Commissioner Barrett.

"No, sir, that we didn't—not at any time, not ever. We could hear voices on the second floor and Tilly whispers to me that that's her madam and the other gentleman. We just parks in front of the furnace and decides to wait till the company leaves. Tilly has brought some of her missis' cigarets and we just sits there, quiet-like, and smokes."

Man Visited House

"What did you do with the ashes?" asked Anderson.

"We put them and the butts in one little pile—didn't want to leave no clues, you see."

"You were armed, I suppose?"

Tim hesitated. He had been, of course, but he feared to incriminate himself.

"I wasn't toting a gun," he acknowledged frankly. "I had a blackjack, just in case the gentleman of the house come back too early—but I never intended to hit the young lady."

"And then what?"

"Well, the folks upstairs chawed the rag until I shoulda thought they'd be dead. It was mortal cold down there in the cellar and Tilly and me was afraid to move around any. At last they gets up and we hears 'em all saying good-night.

"Tilly and me waits another fifteen minutes for the lady to start for bed and I was just getting ready to sneak up the cellar stairs and look over the lay of the land when there comes a snappy ring at the door-bell, very soft-like."

"Are you sure it was the door-bell—not the telephone?"

"No, sir, it was the door-bell all right, because the young lady comes flying down the stairs from the second floor and opens the front door. She says 'Good-evening' and we hears a man say 'Good-evening.'"

"It was rough and scraping-like—not the voice of a gentleman, you see."

"What did he say?"

"Nothing much that we could hear. They stood there in the hall for a minute talking and then they both started for the second floor."

Girl 'Sentenced to Life of Torture,' Balks At Leaving Devil's Island, Scorns Rescue

Passage to France Arranged, She Fights Friends

By GORDON SINCLAIR

CHAPTER VI.

CAYENNE, French Guiana.—Prowling blood-red back alleys of Cayenne, capital of the colony of correction, you run into queer folks, sounds and smells.

Criers, for instance; town criers who sing, criers who moan and dance, criers who thump drums, criers who scream. Convict hawkers trying to sell high-powered rum, murderous-looking clasp knives, miniature guillotines, dice said to be made of human bones. Tattoo professors are keen to needle a skull and cross bones on your forehead or to ink the instruction across your throat:

"Cut on the dotted line."

You see butterfly brokers, too, and lordly black jungle trackers who earn their keep by hunting men more cunningly than they'd hunt the ferocious jaguar or the hardest hitting jungle snake in the world—the bushmaster.

They hunt escaped desperadoes from the convict camps and play their game both ways from the middle. If the convict is flat broke they herd him back to camp for the reward ranging from 50 cents to $3. If he's got money or gold, as most of them have, the jungle prowler demands a split for protection.

"Guiltless Girl, 22, May Never Leave Grim Devil's Isle."

On the way down I saw the same tale spread over the Demerara papers with a biting editorial about the mental and physical tortures she'd had to endure just because her parents were convicts.

That sounded a bit off the mark because they stopped sending female killers here 20 years ago, but it was worth digging into. I was wakened at dawn by the tramp of marching feet. A home town battalion swept by in full marching kit. White men marching with blacks, creoles, octoroons, Chinese and half-breeds, for every man in this sad land has to do his stretch with the colors.

Then came a troop of Senegalese, the blackest fighting men I ever looked upon. It's the Senegalese drummers who summon the home folks when a man is to be executed on the high hill over the harbor.

I shaved in red water. Thirty vultures perched sleepily on the tin shack across the way. In the beautiful palm garden planted by Jesuits a hundred years ago convicts in stripes sprawled at ease on stone benches, while children kicked a football around. These convicts were supposed to be cutting grass; but why hurry? Isn't this the Riviera of the condemned?

A crier done up like a side show dancer came down the street rattling a school bell. He had other bells hanging from his wooden leg and a drum around his equator. He rumbled a tattoo on his drum and started to bawl; two men had evaded their captors and fled to the mahogany uplands, the air mail left next day; Marcelle Zephir had a super special one-day sale in soap, soup kettles, cotton dresses and silk stockings; the movies were going to show "Trader Horn"; the price of blue-winged butterflies was on the rise.

Another crier with a violin and a howling monkey on a rope came to the same corner and whooped his story. He told of new babies and sick people, too. Then, like a radio announcer, he yipped about special bargains in everything from used cars to tennis balls.

"Come on. Get going."

The convict smiled.

"Time for one cigaret. Lots of time."

He lit up and sat down under a tree, studying the vast industry of some red ants. The guard strolled away without saying anything. He dare not smoke on duty. With the convicts it's okay. Can you go for that?

A DEVIL'S ISLAND FREEMAN . . . DELICACY: BUTTERFLY WINGS

Hunt for Escaped Prisoners Rich Racket

Far down at the fringe of town I crossed a bridge over a dark, soupy stream. Colorful natives in gaudy bandana kerchiefs paddled dugouts loaded with cockatoos, monkeys, breadfruit, plantains and other jungle produce. Convicts were draped around the banks, some of them fishing. They were first class prisoners.

Under the eye of a guard another group of Chinese clanked noisily toward the sea. These were all chained, leg to leg, and weren't allowed to speak or smoke or sit.

I went through a maze of grass huts to a smelly stone building to seek this girl "who through no fault of her own is sentenced to a life of torture and barbarity; with the prospect that it will never end."

There is no hope. Only water and the thick foliage, the marshland and the vampire bats that come at night and drink her blood while she sleeps.

A gaunt Arab in filthy clothes stopped me at the door. I could see the girl inside on a camp chair. She got up and hobbled toward me. Her foot was a stump; her eyes were hollow. I explained my mission. The girl tossed back her head and snorted. She slapped her hands on skinny hips and stood there, mocking me. She was wearing a grimy kimono. Her hair was matted and greasy.

The Arab came over and pushed me. I waited a half minute and he pushed me again. The girl was getting hysterical.

I went back up the street and found Capt. Charles Pean, of the Salvation Army. He was having some food with ex-convicts, among whom the army is doing magnificent work. A chubby ex-killer with blonde curls bustled over with coffee for me. The captain said:

"Yes, I have read that story. In fact it was published in Paris and the government cabled to have it looked into. We found her, took her to the hospital, bought her clothes and arranged passage for her to France. Within three days she escaped. We brought her back, tried to reason with her. She ran away again and scratched one of our men terribly. If that girl wants to go back to France we, the Salvation Army, will pay her fare. We'll take her back. She simply doesn't want to go."

I strolled up the street with the captain. That seemed to be that.

JUNIOR PATROL

Endurance is one of the most important things, fellows!

There are some fellows who can work hard for a little while, and play a good game of basketball, tennis or football for a little while. But they soon "puff out." They can't keep it up. Soon they slow up, and players with more endurance play rings around them.

In everything we do, fellows, and this means both boys and girls, try to develop your endurance. Boys need endurance to play games and to do good work, yes, but it is just as important for the girls. Many girls learn to be nurses. Often, a nurse must stay up long hours, working hard to save a life. Often, she must work hard and long after she has been tired out by a long, hard journey.

In fact, no matter what you want to do, endurance is important. The best way to get endurance is to get as strong and healthy as you can—physically and mentally fit.

We hear that President Roosevelt is going to ask all the Boy Scouts to do something for him soon. Nobody but the President knows what it is yet. But we'll bet it is something worthwhile and important. And we hope the Junior Patrol will be able to help, too.

We have a fine list of fellows who have signed the pledges and elected Frank Klobucar, of Hendersonville, Pa., Box 51, their Junior Patrol captain. There are 14 members altogether, and they look like a dandy patrol. Let us know how you get along, Frank.

JUNIOR PATROL PLEDGE

I promise to help children less fortunate than I am,
I promise to do my best to make my parents proud of me.
I promise to watch carefully when crossing streets and to aid other children in keeping out of danger.
I promise to be a 100% Junior Patrol member.

Date of Birth ..... Address .....

School .....

Address this pledge to the JUNIOR PATROL, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa. Upon its receipt you will be registered as a member of the JUNIOR PATROL and will be forwarded a membership card and an official emblem.

Flicking the Buggy Whip

We admire the 1934 motor car and shall go further if we pass the literacy test of our finance corporation.

But we get a trifle dumbeazled over the continuous cheering of the automotive engineers.

Say, the bicycle was a triumph over the hoss and buggy.

Yet the old faded hoss had some selling points. You didn't have to keep trading him in to remain in tempo with the neighbor's new job. No matter what the gray mare looked like in 1893 you knew she would be just as handsome in 1894.

A good hoss lasted 12 years and was never old until he fell down when you were trying to sell him. There was no violation of any code in parking him by a fire plug. He would bite it once and then leave city property alone forever.

The most handy thing about the hoss and buggy was that the engine was detachable. You could sell the four wheels, the collapsible top, the rumble seat and the fifth wheel and still have live transportation home if you remembered the address.

When you hooked Champ to the tumbril that was all there was to it. You knew the way to town and Champ knew the way back. If you fall asleep at the wheel now it's $10 or 10 days. When the judge figures your value to the world at a dollar a day he is tempering justice with sarcasm.

There were no traffic lights in Dobbin's day or policemen waving you in a direction you were trying to avoid. When you look at the equestrian statues of Grant, Lee and Washington you know the hoss must have had some value and recognition. He is up there on the pedestals with the great men.

We never saw and never want to see a marble statue of a streamlined motor car with six granite heroes inside of it.

The engineers may chortle about their victory over the hoss and buggy. But it is no triumph at all. The motor car may go faster we admit. But no man shall ever sell our memories of Black Beauty to the glue factory.

PWA Aid Promised

The Projects Are Desirable and Will Add Little to the County Taxes.

Indignation over the Public Works Administration's shabby treatment of Western Pennsylvania is tempered somewhat by the announcement that "if, when and as" additional appropriations are granted by Congress twenty-five million dollars will be loaned to the Allegheny County authority for various projects.

The program calls for a new bridge and tunnel to the South Hills, a high level bridge across the Monongahela at Homestead and two other bridges across that stream, a bridge across the Allegheny at Aspinwall, a bridge across the Youghiogheny at McKeesport, a waterfront improvement down town, and highway and county park improvements.

All of the projects are desirable, and some are sorely needed.

Inasmuch as tolls to be charged for the use of the bridges will go to the liquidation of the loans, the improvements will add comparatively little to the burden of the county taxpayers.

Allegheny County's congressmen and civic leaders should exert themselves to the utmost to see that the PWA's promise is fulfilled.

An Undemocratic Slate

The Selection of Candidates by Mr. Guffey and Mr. Lawrence Is a Blow at the Primary

The Democratic State Committee, headed by Chairman Warren Van Dyke, but managed actually by Joseph F. Guffey and David L. Lawrence, plans to indorse a slate of primary candidates for state offices at its meeting in Harrisburg Saturday.

The slate will be one picked by Mr. Guffey and Mr. Lawrence in a Philadelphia hotel room last week, a system reminiscent of the Republican "Old Guard" which went down to defeat because it similarly over a long space of years arrogated to itself political domination, and ignored the public will. The Democratic state chairman is required to take out nominating petitions for the slated candidates, circulate them, and file them with the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

That makes the head of the state committee not a party leader but a factional boss. It is an attempt to exclude Democrats not in favor with organization leaders from a fair chance at nomination.

The theory of the nominating primary is that it shall be free and open to all members of a party. To proceed as the Democratic State Committee apparently intends is to strike a blow at the primary and attempt to nullify its democracy.

Mr. Guffey and Mr. Lawrence should remember that to win a state election they must have the support of hundreds of thousands of independent Republicans who within their own party have rebelled at exactly the same inner circle tactics that the Democrats are employing. If these Democratic leaders are wise they will declare for a free and open primary by abandoning their plan to compel an indorsement through the force of federal patronage as applied to the votes of the state committee members.

Theoretically the Democratic state committee represents the party. It does not represent the great army of independent Republicans.

A Civil Service Farce

The Liquor Board Is Making a Mockery of the Right Principle for Choosing Employes

When the State Liquor Control Board hired its first employes civil service advocates cheered because the examinations for applicants appeared to establish the civil service principle firmly in at least this branch of state employment.

There were faults in the examination, admitted both by the board and the state Department of Education, because the dalliance of the Legislature permitted only a few days for the necessary preparation. However, there was no favoritism, and no special selection.

Now the board intends to hire enforcement agents, investigators and some minor employes, amounting in all to about 50. And the qualifications set forth for applicants destroy completely the principle of civil service. The board first selected the persons it wished to secure, then so worded specifications that practically no one else could qualify.

The holding of an examination amounts to no more than a farce, as officials of the Department of Education, who must conduct it, disgustedly admit. The rules were drawn by the Liquor Board, whose two members are Robert S. Gawthrop, recommended by the Republican organization, and A. Marshall Thompson, named by the Democratic organization. The third member, who was to be a Pinchot selection, has never been named.

Perhaps it is too late for the Liquor Board, one of whose members is understood to admit frankly that the qualifications were written to fit certain men, to repair its massacre of civil service in this examination. But there must be no more of this direct and unquestioned favoritism.

A Young Bank President

Richard K. Mellon Has Taken the Trouble to Learn the Business from the Bottom Up.

The third generation of the Mellon family yesterday took over the control of its affairs. Richard King Mellon, son of the late Richard B. Mellon and nephew of Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, was elected president of the Mellon National Bank, key institution in the financial empire.

Mr. Mellon has been taking an increasingly important place in business affairs. In recent years, when his father's health was failing, he succeeded his father on the boards of directors of many of the great corporations which the Mellons had developed.

Last week he announced that the Forbes National Bank, of which he is president, will open a branch in the Gulf Building. This will be the first banking expansion in this district since the crisis of last March.

In the hands of this young man (he is only 34) has been placed great power for good or evil. Those who know him are confident that this power will be used wisely and well.

Mr. Mellon is well liked by his associates. He has taken the trouble to learn the banking business from the bottom up as well as the top down. Following his graduation from Princeton in 1922, he started his career as a messenger. From there he went through many of the pick and shovel jobs of banking before he became an officer.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The newspaper game has become so cluttered with specialists it is a joy to come upon one of the comparatively old time all-arounders such as Jerry Breitigam. I glimpsed him a moment, after many years, leaving a theater the other night. The same thinly-honed Jerry of a hundred or more editorial rooms.

And with the same charming wife he married on $200 won in a crap game when a reporter on the Kansas City Star 20 years ago. He is the sort of Gerald one naturally calls Jerry, eager for scent of a story and perpetually wide-eyed with astonishment that life can be so full of surprises.

He has been a copy boy, crack reporter, copy reader, city editor, Washington correspondent, sports writer and director of the love-lorn department. His wife, who was a newspaperwoman, too, keeps one eye on the skillet and another on the timetable for she knows not what moment Jerry may grow grimly morose.

That is the warning signal. He will soon be on the move. He has worked on four or five newspapers in New York, perhaps all. Every large city has felt his journalistic touch. In honorable devotion to an honorable calling he has dodged but one issue—a crisis with boredom.

The separate establishment arrangement between Fannie Hurst and her husband, Jacques Danielson, has run the gamut of years without a single crack-up. They have their dinners together several times a week, appear at parties doubly or singly and always phone each other once a day. Mr. Danielson, away frequently on concert tours, often adds a humorous touch to the situation. Recently he was invited to a theater party. "Sorry, I can't," he said with a twinkle. "Fannie is having a dinner party and needs an extra man."

Katharine Hepburn invited the dramatic critic who wrote the most scathing review of her stage play to join a group of lunchers at her apartment the day following her premiere. They were old friends and he accepted without feeling the usual tension. He reports that the most unusual thing happened, however, afterward. In telling a group at the Algonquin of his visit not one of the brighter minds inquired: "After reading your review, did Hepburn?"

Indeed, the only critic I recall the victim of personal assault by an actor was the late Acton Davies. A slight, foppish fellow, he entered the old Fifth Avenue Hotel bar one evening. The incensed actor leaped from his chair with a bellow and charged. Davies, to the surprise of everybody, including himself, stood his ground, returned cuff for cuff, adjusted his hat and tie, minced to the mahogany in his mignon way and ordered a drink of that day, known ironically enough, as the Angel's Kiss.

Richard Bennett, in more tempestuous days, was fiercest in resistance to the stinging critique. He would boom his resentment from the stage at curtain calls. But that was far as it went. He rather enjoyed trading blows. He could take it.

But of all the critic-baiters, Florenz Ziegfeld was the most persistent. Like all artistic showmen, he was super-sensitive. I know of one instance where, following a first-night blast, he sent a jeering telegram every Saturday night for 56 weeks, the run of the show, with box office figures, to a critic who said his show wouldn't last five.

George M. Cohan and William Gaxton, with Adolphe Menjou, holding down the Western sector, are the most extravagant buyers of lounging robes. In England the distinction belongs to Jack Buchanon. All are reputed to have more robes than suits in extraordinarily large wardrobes. Max Schmeling has, by the way, a flair for dressing gowns of flamboyant color. He recently brought one from Germany with red dots on a green background and collars and cuffs of canary yellow.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Whoops for That!

Lady, lady, how strong I am for that new song—"ANNIE DOESN'T LIVE HERE ANY MORE."

According to the feminists, Suffrage marked the Great Step toward female freedom. But just between you an' me, Mabel, I'm betting that Dear Little Annie's Walk-out will do more for us girls than all the "Women's Rights" ever invented.

Annie, as you doubtless know, Stuck Around for quite a while, waiting—in the approved manner—for the Boy Friend. Yes, Annie at the start lived up to the best traditions of the Soggy Sisterhood. Indeed, she had already suffered and sniveled her way through countless roles.

We met her, back in the 90's, under the name of Sweet Alice. How grandma sobbed to those soulful lines:

"Oh, do your remember sweet
Alice, Ben Bolt,
"Sweet Alice, with eyes of brow-
ow-own?
"She wept with delight
"When you ga-a-a-a-ve her a smile,
"And she trem-em-em-embled with tears
"At your frown!"

Did anyone at this point arise to ask "How come?" or remark "Watta Sap?" Did anyone suggest that Alice cut out the trembling and hand the Big Pouter a well-deserved smack in the jaw? My-goodness-gracious-no!

Pubic endorsement of Sweet Alice's wormish conduct was unanimous. It was conceded, without one dissenting vote, that the dear girl was acting as all dear girls should act. For was it not ordained that women should take whatever lot Man, the Master, handed them—and be grateful if it wasn't a kick in the jaw? It was. So Alice's snuffles were only right and proper.

Well, the world rolled on. But men still ran the works and women still wrung their hands. Along came Suffrage, Bobbed Hair, One Piece Bathing Suits, Female Professions an' everything, making Us Girls, supposedly, free as air. Yet Annie and Alice, Rosie and Clarabelle, still sobbed on and on for some Big Bruiser's favors.

There was Fannie Brice, telling the whole world that—in spite of a black eye, a couple of broken ribs and maybe a fractured skull—he was forevermore her "Ma-a-an!" Let's see; how'd it go? Something like this:

"It cost me a lot—
"But there's one thing that I've got—
"It's my ma-a-an!
"Cold and wet I do get,
"But all that I soon forget—
"With my ma-a-an!

* * *

"Two or three girls has he
"That he likes as well as me—
"But I love him—
"I don't know why I should;
"He isn't good; he isn't true;
"He beats me too. What can I do?

* * *

"But I don't care.

* * *

"What's the difference
"If I say I'll go away,
"When I know I'll come back
"On my knees, some day?"

So on and on. Yet Fannie, remember, had the bulge over Alice in this. Fannie was educated and modern. She didn't have to stand being knocked around. She could get a job—or call a cop. But it still wasn't being done, so Fannie stuck around and took her punishment.

Now we're in 1934—with Annie. Annie, as noted before, stuck to the rules in the beginning. She waited and wept, grew wistful and wan, as Nice Womanly Women are supposed to do. In the meantime the Boy Friend went his carefree way. For, like all men, he was thoroughly sold to the classic notion that:

"Man's love is of his life a thing
'Tis woman's whole existence."

So the B. F. went on being a Thing Apart—until one day he happended to remember Dear Little Annie. Then he dropped around, all ready to give the Poor Little Woman a treat. But—goody, goody, goody!

ANNIE DIDN'T LIVE THERE ANY MORE!

Annie, at last, for practically the first time in human history, was fed up. By some miracle it had occurred to her that the world was filled with an infinite number of phenomena more diverting than Mean Males.

And suppose she never did have a Romance again? Well—suppose she didn't; what of it? Too much of anything was too many. If Romance came that high, she couldn't use it. And if she never saw a man again—she could still eat and dream, laugh and work, and be generally useful and gay!

SO ANNIE WENT HER WAY! And though I'm no man hater—I'm for that kid a million!

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

You and I

Who are they whom labor brings
Boons too blessed to deny,
Toiling on with heart that sings?
You and I!

Who are they who learn at last
Wise men put vain longings by,
And, so learning, leave the past?
You and I!

Who are they who seek and gain
Tender heart and seeing eye
As the rich rewards of pain?
You and I!

Who are they who often find,
As the days so swiftly fly,
Just how good life is, how kind?
You and I!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Most families have need of a peace maker.

Have you ever thought what a success you might be in this line?

In many of the differences which arise in your home, a few well chosen and well placed words from one not engaged in a dispute or altercation might result in a cessation of hostilities.

In your family circle there may be one member or more who seem particularly prone to rousing the others in controversy.

Perhaps you are the one to fire the argument even though you may have the best intentions and be not the least desirous of adding fuel to the flame.

Perhaps you are abrupt—perhaps too much like the one who angers the other.

At any rate squabbles result and, as none acts as mediator, ill-feeling grows.

In extreme cases actual antipathy exists.

There ceases to be a family feeling such as holds families together.

When this stage is reached, home and home folk have lost their greatest charm; loyalty and love.

SONS OF A CHINESE GENERAL WEAR MOURNING

When General Li Yuen Hong died, in 1928, he was not buried immediately. He was an important general and it was necessary to choose exactly the right day and year for his funeral.

In accordance with Chinese custom, the funeral ceremony proper was delayed several years.

Wise men, "seers," were consulted as to the auspicious situation and orientation of the mausoleum built to contain the body.

Should it point east, west, north or south?

At last all these difficult questions were settled and, after waiting four years, the body of Li Yuen Hong, once President of the Chinese Republic, was taken to Hankow for burial.

Mourning is a matter of custom, and no nation should criticize the customs of another. It is too much like throwing stones when you live in glass houses.

Our own custom of burying a widow from her head to her feet in gloomy black, with a veil over her face so thick that you cannot see through it, has a little of the barbarian about it, although to us it seems eminently respectable and respectful.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

SOME OF the stories of telepathy and black magic told by Dr. Alexander Cannon in his new book, "The Invisible Influence," sound incredibly fantastic. He states, for example, that a well-known English judge, Mr. Justice McCardie, was killed not by his own hand, but by telepathy. An evil spirit from Tibet, it was, who raised the pistol to the temple of Mr. Justice McCardie.

Nevertheless, as a writer in the London Sunday Chronicle quite truly asserts, strange things do occur—extraordinary instances of something which is hard to name if you don't call it telepathy.

In Paris, in the Gare de Lyons, the writer met an old friend who was just going to Rome by the night express. Quite casually the gentleman who was leaving for Rome asked his friend to excuse him for a few moments while he got in touch with a friend who was seriously ill.

Thinking that he wanted to telephone, his companion said to him:

"You will have to hurry. It takes a good half hour to get through from Paris to London at this time of night."

The other man smiled and shook his head.

"I do not need to telephone," he said.

And he took out of his waistcoat pocket a little case which contained a ball of platinum about the size of a cherry and hanging on a silver chain.

Paying no attention whatever to his friend's obvious astonishment and perturbation, the man with the platinum ball closed his eyes, and there in the crowded restaurant, with waiters hurrying by and corks popping, he laid a letter on the table, smoothed it out and dangled the little ball of platinum above the letter.

Nothing happened. The man's face began to grow very pale. After a minute the ball rolled from his fingers and fell to the floor. His friend rescued it. The other man, white and distraught, said quietly:

"Forgive me. I must go out."

When he came back he said:

His companion asked hastily:

"But has anything happened?"

"Yes," was the reply. "The boy—her son—is dead."

The following day the gentleman who had been the amazed witness of this extraordinary incident learned that the death had taken place at 10 minutes past 7 o'clock in the evening. He and his friend had sat down to dine in the restaurant of the Gare de Lyons at 7:20.

Eery Incident In a Paris Hotel

ONLY a little while ago a visitor to Paris registered at a hotel near the Seine.

"Is the room quiet?" he asked the manager.

"Very quiet, indeed, monsieur. And see; it has a charming view."

It was very quiet—absolutely still. And then the visitor was awakened from a sound sleep by a peculiar noise, or series of noises. For a moment he was puzzled, and then his mind, springing out of the paralysis of sleep, grasped the fact that a dog was barking in the next room. It sounded muffled, but was very clear, just the same. The visitor listened more and more impatiently, and then angrily, as the barking continued. Then he heard a voice talking to the dog, soothing it, pleading with it.

The visitor got out of bed and put his ear against the locked door connecting the two hotel rooms. He heard the voice quite distinctly—an American voice—talking in a sort of strangled whisper:

"Never mind, never mind. It will be all right soon."

And then again, the bark and the whine—a horrible whine that sounded almost human.

Barking Resumed In the Morning

IT BECAME insufferable. The man who had been torn from sleep by these weird and disturbing sounds in the middle of the night seized the handle of the door and rattled it. Silence came instantly. The door was so thin that the man who was protesting could hear the breathing of the other man. He, too, was close to the door. There they stood—two strangers on opposite sides of a thin door, breathing at each other in the dark.

Feeling decidedly uncomfortable, the visitor climbed back into bed. No more sounds came from the other room, and presently he fell again to sleep. But in the morning, soon after light came, the barking began again—louder this time—and the whining was even more nerve-racking. The visitor hastened downstairs and to the manager's office.

The manager looked troubled. He said, as he closed his door:

"There is no dog in that room, monsieur."

"What do you mean?" demanded the visitor. "Are you suggesting that I am mad?"

"Not at all," said the manager. "But we think that Mr. Blank is. He is an American businessman. He lost his fortune in the crash. He had no friends. He never spoke to anybody but his dog, and it died a few days ago. It is he who makes the noise."

He paused for a moment, then added:

"But he is leaving today. You will not be troubled any more."
